

Zoning scandal probes turn up suspected corruption

JAMES THOMPSON

by NANCY COWGER and BOB CASEY

The massive federal investigation of corruption in Chicago and 44 suburbs is beginning to have a "domino effect," with evidence of wrongdoing turned up in one case often leading probers on to several others.

Among cases that U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office hopes to use to uncover corruption in other areas are zoning scandals in Hoffman Estates and Wheeling, The Herald has learned.

Bernard Peskin, a key figure in the Hoffman Estates case convicted Thursday of bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy, may be required to provide information in other cases under a grant of immunity from further prosecution.

THE U.S. ATTORNEY'S office plans to seek an immunity grant for Peskin, an attorney specializing in zoning matters, and obtain his testimony about approval of developments by other suburbs and by Cook County, according to a source close to the case.

The Wheeling probe resulted Jan. 31 in the indictments of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and five others on extortion and conspiracy charges. It has "opened a door" on corruption in Cook County government, another federal source said.

The Herald has learned that zoning actions by Cook County have been under scrutiny by federal investigators for several months. Asst. U. S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, head of Thompson's Special Investigations Division, confirmed that the county probe is under way but declined to comment further.

Last week's guilty verdict for Peskin, former state representative who resigned as Northfield Township Democratic committeeman just before his indictment Oct. 26, keeps Thompson's conviction record at 100 per cent in the suburban probe.

OF THE 14 PERSONS and one developer indicted so far in the investigation of corruption in 44 suburbs, seven have pleaded guilty, one has pleaded no contest, one has been found guilty and charges are pending against seven others.

Peskin's conviction by a federal jury followed earlier guilty pleas by six former Hoffman Estates officials and a plea of no contest by Kaufman and Broad, Inc., which used Peskin to funnel payoffs to village officials in 1968.

One of the six Wheeling defendants, former village trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the extortion of furniture from Wickes, Inc., for favorable zoning. Five other defendants, including Stavros, have pleaded innocent.

Also indicted in the suburban probe was Curtis C. Whittaker, mayor of south suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1968 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Fabian, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U. S. Atty. Anton Valukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoffs to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park, (Continued on Page 2)

Buttons say 'We Care' to backers of paramedics

Bright lime green "We Care" buttons are beginning to appear on the lapels of Wheeling residents as a community drive to finance the village paramedic program gets under way.

The buttons, which feature a picture of a paramedic van, are being sold throughout the village for $1. Twelve community groups and various others are selling the buttons in stores, on street corners and from door to door.

Trustee William Hein, organizer of the program, said 5,000 buttons have arrived. In addition, he said over 300 canisters have been placed in local stores for people who wish to contribute less than $1.

HEIN SAID he is hoping the "We Care" drive will raise $10,000 for the purchase of equipment for a second paramedic unit.

Originally, the program was designed to defray the cost of starting Wheeling's paramedic program. Hein, however, said the village is financing the first paramedic van and equipment with federal revenue sharing funds. The paramedic program is scheduled to begin this month.

The trustee said it will be important to have a back-up paramedic van for emergencies and in case the first unit needs repairs. "We've got to have two. There is no question about it," he said.

To promote the fundraising campaign, Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon has proclaimed April as "We Care" month. The first button sales were made at Monday's village board meeting when four girl scouts from Wheeling troop 29 collected about $40 from board members and the audience.

For the street corner sales, volunteers will wear specially designed ponchos.

Hein said the program is going very well. Some persons selling the buttons, including Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen, said the demand has been so great that

Our paramedics to start soon

Wheeling's first paramedic program should start in mid-April, according to Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen.

The first of the necessary telemetry equipment is scheduled to arrive this week and the remainder, the following week. There has been a delay of several weeks in delivery of the equipment.

Under the paramedic program, specially trained firemen will be able to give emergency medical treatment to patients both at the emergency scene and on the way to the hospital. The fire department ambulance will be directly lined to the emergency room at a local hospital through the special electronic equipment.

Most firemen have already completed the necessary training and parts of the program have been in use for several weeks.

California man suffers bullet wound, listed 'fair'

A 35-year-old Hollywood, Calif. man remained in fair condition Sunday at Lutheran General Hospital, after he was shot in the neck early Friday in Wheeling. Although police would not comment on the case, other sources indicated it may have been a self-inflicted, accidental wound.

Police were called to the A. Madsen Cabinet and Fixture Corp. offices, 528 N. Milwaukee Ave., at 2:54 p.m. They found Wayne Madsen, 35, with a bullet wound in his neck.

Madsen was taken first to Holy Family

Hospital where, a hospital spokesman said, he refused to be admitted. The Wheeling Fire Department was not called in to transport Madsen.

FROM HOLY FAMILY Hospital, Madsen was taken to Lutheran General Hospital, where he was admitted. According to witnesses at the hospitals, Madsen was taken from Holy Family in handcuffs and was allegedly upset with the policemen.

Holmes Junior High School students making marked improvement in reading: principal

An intensive reading improvement program at Wheeling's Holmes Junior High School is significantly increasing student ability, according to principal James Johnson.

Johnson said Thursday that student reading scores on standardized tests annually given in the district indicate pupils "are benefiting greatly" from the program.

Before the program was set up three years ago, he said many seventh- and eighth-grade students at Holmes were scoring poorly on the standardized tests.

BY COMPARISON, he said, pupils in the reading program last year showed an improvement in their reading ability equivalent to 1.6 years on the average. All exhibited some improvement in reading, he said, with some students showing an increase of as much as three years. An improvement of one year is considered normal.

Although standardized reading tests have not yet been given in Dist. 21 this year, Johnson said he feels current seventh and eighth graders will score as well as those last year.

"We feel through our own testing and evaluation at this point that these kids will do as well," he said.

About 45 per cent of the students at Holmes are presently involved in the reading-improvement program. It is specifically designed for students reading at a level at least six months behind their chronological age or who have been identified as having particular reading problems.

STUDENTS IN the reading program receive specialized reading instruction four days per week. Teachers and aides directing the program evaluate student performance one day per week.

Next year, the reading program will be expanded to involve all Holmes students.

"We want to continue to provide remedial help for the kids who are reading below their level and analyze the skills of the others and work with them to develop their reading ability so that they can push ahead even further," Johnson said.

Wolf-Manchester annex petition on board agenda

The Wheeling Village Board tonight will consider a petition to annex about eight acres at the southeast corner of Wolf Road and Manchester Drive.

The annexation is being sought by Theodore and Marion Melzer. The G. S. Building Corp. of Arlington Heights has applied for rezoning of the property to allow construction of a planned development.

Other items on the agenda of tonight's meeting include:

• Bid opening for the construction of an addition to the Wheeling fire station.

• Agreement regarding the installation and maintenance of traffic signals at Dundee and Wheeling roads.

• Resolution for interim transportation funding.

• Full payment in the amount of $2,983.28 to Schuster Equipment Co. for a salt spreader.

The meeting is set for 8 p.m. at the Wheeling village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Polls open noon-9 p.m. for library election

The polls will be open from noon until 9 p.m. Tuesday for voters to cast ballots in the uncontested election to fill three available seats on the Wheeling Public Library District Board of Trustees.

Residents of the Wheeling Library District may vote at the library, 850 Jenkins Ct., Wheeling.

Incumbent Larry Green, 683 Cleo Ct., Wheeling is running for a four-year term on the library board. Daniel Riess, 306 Regent Dr., Buffalo Grove is seeking to retain a six-year seat on the board and newcomer Arthur Dobish, 115 Berkshire Dr., Wheeling will fill the other six-year seat open on the board.

Incorporation case resumes

Proponents and opponents of Prospect Heights incorporation are slated to meet again today in court as hearings on whether an incorporation referendum will be held continue.

The case will reconvene at 10 a.m. before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Harry J. Comerford in Chicago's Civic Center. Comerford also has set aside April 29 for the case. He begins a two-week vacation on Wednesday.

The Prospect Heights Improvement

Assn., which is sponsoring incorporation, is expected to present five witnesses at today's hearing. Three members of the PHIA are expected to testify to the authenticity of the petition signatures, an engineer will testify on the proposed boundaries and an "expert" will testify on the population of the proposed community.

Under the law, Prospect Heights must have more than 7,500 residents in an area under four square miles to be able to incorporate.

The men love the cars, the women love Redford

Gatsby-itis infects suburban viewers

THE LEAD CAR is a 1931 Ford Model A Cabriolet, and it's part of the publicity attached to the release of the movie, "The Great Gatsby." This cortege of cars in New Jersey is part

by KAREN BLECHA
"I saw the Sting and it was fantastic," said the 16-year-old girl who had been waiting in the movie line for almost an hour. "But this movie has got to be better. I mean it has Robert Redford and a love story!"

Other people in the Saturday afternoon line at Woodfield Theater nodded in agreement. They were all bitten by the same Hollywood bug: Gatsby-itis. For months, promoters pelted the Chicago area with Gatsby wares — Gatsby clothes, hairdos, furniture, even cookware. And now the movie had come to the Northwest suburbs and people were waiting in line to see what many critics believe is only a mediocre film.

The movie version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's "The Great Gatsby" starring Robert Redford and Mia Farrow, opened Friday at the Woodfield Theater in Schaumburg, the Golf Mill Theater in Niles and the Catlow in Barrington. By box offices measures, it is a success. Managers reported sell-out crowds for evening performances. At Woodfield, several hundred persons were turned away on opening night.

"THERE'S A LOT of women in the audience and we are getting some older couples who usually don't come to the movies," said Jeff Webb, manager of the Woodfield Theater, where tickets prices are $2 for matinees and $3 for evening shows.

"Possibly, the older people are coming in to relive their past, some of their youth," Webb said.

There were a few senior citizens in the crowd at Woodfield Saturday, listening with other movie fans to the Jazz Age music piped through the outdoor speakers. But most of the moviegoers were female and well under 60 years old, dressed casually, as if they hadn't seen the Gatsby ensembles in the store windows only a few yards away.

What mattered to them was that they were getting in to see the movie talked about so much for so long. The Great Gatsby — the story of Jay S. Gatsby (Redford) and his undying love for Daisy Buchanan (Farrow).

INSIDE THE theater, the audience sat in near-silence, watching the opulence and dress and the beauty of Redford. Only twice was there any audible reaction to the film, when Redford gave his first kiss to Mia Farrow and when Jordan Baker, played by Lois Chiles, filled her car with gasoline for 40 cents.

In a little more than two hours, the extravaganza was over. Some said they liked it, others were disappointed.

Ben Stein, manager of the Golf Mill Theater, said he doesn't think the Great Gatsby will have the same holding power as The Sting, in which Redford and Paul Newman play lovable con men in the Chicago of the 1930s.

"The Sting was here for 15 weeks and we were selling out in the 15th week. I doubt if that will happen with Gatsby," Stein said. "The Sting everybody liked. But we're not hearing that about Gatsby. The women love it, but the men are non-committal."

Edward Kkehan, manager of the Catlow where the Sting just finished an eight-week run, said he doesn't think audiences are ready yet for F. Scott Fitzgerald.

"People are still looking for good times. They like an upbeat ending," he said. "In the Sting, they get the upbeat ending. In Gatsby, they get a hearse."

Ex-school head dead at 73

Noble Puffer
Dr. Noble J. Puffer of Palatine who was for 28 years the Cook County Superintendent of Schools died Saturday at the age of 73.

Dr. Puffer served the county school system since 1926 and won successive terms of office as superintendent from 1935 until his defeat in 1966 to Republican Robert Hanrahan.

Following his defeat at the polls, Dr. Puffer was educational superintendent for the Museum of Science and Industry until his retirement last December.

During his lifelong career in education in Illinois, Dr. Puffer was athletic director of a downstate high school and, in 1924, became assistant principal of Arlington High School, Arlington Heights. For funeral details, see Obituaries, Sec. 2, page 7.

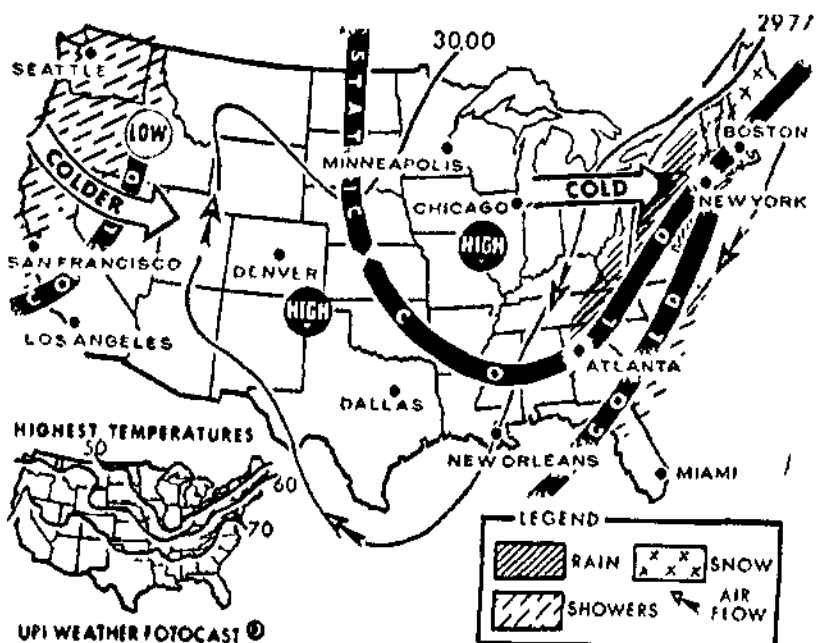

New Mount Prospect train depot?

Plans for a new commuter depot using the air rights above the Chicago & North Western Ry. tracks are being discussed in Mount Prospect. Although the names of the developers have not been revealed, both the village manager and mayor say the idea has substance to it. Tentative plans call for a new building that would house the old depot, two floors of parking space and additional office space.

Charge Elk Grove man murderer

Cook County Sheriff's Police yesterday charged an Elk Grove Township man with murder in the gunshot slaying of Hector Cardona, 24, of Chicago. Daniel Torres, 57, of 2045 E. Higgins Rd., in the Higgins Trailer Park, allegedly slew Cardona during a confrontation concerning Torres' daughter, whom Cardona had been dating. A bond hearing will be held this morning in Niles Court.

May 9 hearing in township tax collection lawsuit

A May 9 hearing was set for the latest round in the township tax collector suit before Circuit Court Judge Donald J. O'Brien.

O'Brien allowed two groups of attorneys to participate in the case — one group seeking to eliminate all the township collectors' jobs and another asking that the controversial collector's posts be kept.

THE MAY 9 hearing will reconsider a 1969 injunction which barred township collectors from collecting taxes.

The ban on the collectors performing their statutory duty of processing taxes came as part of the court order which ruled out a 2 per cent fee they received for the tax payments they collected.

Attorney Richard Cowen, who represents Wheeling, Palatine, Elk Grove, Barrington and New Trier townships in the lawsuit, said his clients are not seeking the reinstatement of the 2 per cent collection fee, but merely the right of township residents to pay their taxes to the local township collector instead of to Cook County.

Federal probes lead to others

Hazelcrest and Bolingbrook.

THE SIX DEFENDANTS in the Wheeling case include Ira Collitz, who resigned from the Cook County Zoning Board after his indictment, and Nicholas Phillips, a planner for the county zoning board and a cousin of Stavros.

Evidence turned up in Wheeling has led investigators to check activities of both men in relation to Cook County government. Collitz, a former state representative, has been associated with an insurance firm headed by County Board Pres. George Dunne.

Robert Haskins, another zoning attorney representing many developers in both the city and suburbs, apparently provided information to the special federal grand jury that Friday indicted Chicago Ald. Paul T. Wigoda on extortion and income tax charges.

Haskins was granted immunity from prosecution Thursday by Chief U. S. District Court Judge Edwin A. Robson. He was named but not charged in the two-count indictment that accuses Wigoda of shaking down two officials of Kenroy, Inc., in 1969.

HASKINS' ACTIVITIES in the suburbs have included acting as attorney for a group of powerful Chicago politicians seeking high-density apartment zoning for a 78-acre development in Hoffman Estates.

The zoning was turned down by the village in 1970, but later granted when Circuit Court Judge Herbert Ellis overruled the village action. Ellis' decision was later upheld on appeal.

After Nixon's Paris whirl

New Moscow summit hope

From Herald news services
President Nixon returned from Paris Sunday optimistic the summit talks in Moscow in late June would produce substantial agreement on limiting offensive nuclear weapons.

Nominate ex-premier to succeed Pompidou

PARIS (UPI) — Parliamentary members of the leading Gaullist coalition party Sunday named ex-Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas, 59, as the official Gaullist candidate in presidential elections May 5 for the successor to Georges Pompidou.

Officials said the party platform would stress a continuation of the foreign policy laid down by Charles De Gaulle and followed by Pompidou. This includes "France's preserving its independence in the world."

The Gaullists, who have been in power for the past 15 years, have followed a policy of independence from the United States and the Soviet Union, a united Europe and friendship with the Arab world without military support of Israel.

White House Chief of Staff Alexander Haig told reporters aboard the presidential jet that Nixon's meeting over breakfast with Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny had made it "very clear that the Soviets and ourselves are very optimistic about the outcome of summit III."

"It is clear there will be positive results in trade, technological exchanges and certainly in strategic arms limitations area," Haig said.

Asked whether this meant that an agreement would be reached on limiting nuclear weapons during the summit, Haig replied "that's what SALT's (Strategic Arms Limitations Talks) all about."

But he declined to say whether Nixon expected agreement with the Soviets on permanent limits on offensive weapons to replace the interim pact signed in Moscow two years ago.

White House officials said there was a possibility Nixon might return to Europe before going to Moscow — but only if the European Common Market countries gave indications they no longer would strike out on new foreign policy initiatives without consulting Washington.

During his 38-hour stay in Paris, Nixon attended a memorial mass for President Georges Pompidou, held talks with seven world leaders and three times strolled through the streets, smiling and shaking hands with wildly applauding Frenchmen.

"I'll come back any time I have an excuse," he told one French fan Sunday. "I love it."

Five of the leaders he saw were Western European chiefs and an American official said the contacts "definitely will have a positive effect on American-European relations."

Nixon's jet landed at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Washington at 2:25 p.m. The President immediately took off by helicopter for the Camp David Presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains. He was expected to return to the White House today.

PRESIDENT NIXON waves to cheering spectators in Paris — outside the U.S. Ambassador's residence — yesterday after ordering his limousine to stop as he was enroute to the airport. Gendarmes and security personnel had to encircle the limousine to keep the enthusiastic crowd back.

Congress aims at funding, Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Campaign financing and an inquiry into the U.S. military alert during the Middle East War last October will take up most of Congress' time this week before it adjourns for Easter.

The Senate bill for public financing of federal election campaigns, intended to end special interest campaign intervention, faces a second vote on cloture Tuesday.

Cloture, the Senate gag rule, would shorten the filibuster that opponents of public financing have waged the past three weeks, but the more than 80 amendments already introduced still have to be debated and voted upon.

Congress is scheduled to recess for Easter after Thursday. It will reconvene April 22.

The Senate today will take up an amendment by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., to make federal election day a national holiday. He said it was aimed at reducing heavy absenteeism in U.S. elections.

Besides Humphrey's amendment, the Senate today will consider one by Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., that would make it illegal to knowingly publish false or defamatory statements about a candidate for federal office.

The bill for public financing of federal elections would set aside tax dollars as a campaign fund for each candidate of a major party equivalent to 15 cents per eligible voter in general elections.

Syria, Israel clash again

From Herald news services
Syrian troops clashed with Israeli warplanes Sunday and Israeli gunners carried their war of attrition on the Golan Heights for the second straight day, Syria reported.

Israel's military command denied Israeli air strikes were launched Sunday and said its planes drove Syrian infiltration units out of the Mt. Hermon region on Saturday.

Both sides, however, did agree that Syrian and Israeli gunners carried their war of attrition on the Golan Heights into its 27th consecutive day.

The Israeli command said its troops suffered no casualties in the day's artillery exchanges which, a spokesman said, began around noon with a Syrian burst.

Troops on both sides were reported to have been reinforced and placed on high alert against the possibility of renewed attacks during the Jewish Passover holiday, which began at sundown Saturday.

Jaworski: may be 2 or 3 more years of Watergate

From Herald news services
Although President Nixon has said "one year of Watergate is enough," Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski said Sunday there may be two or three more years of it.

IRS admits giving reports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service in the past has furnished the White House with reports on some "sensitive" tax cases, IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander said Sunday.

"Some information was furnished to the White House, but there was no continuing pattern," Alexander said. Alexander said he stopped the practice when he took office about nine months ago.

The commissioner denied a suggestion by Sen. Lowell R. Weicker, R-Conn., that the White House used IRS files as a sort of "lending library" of tax information on persons President Nixon's staff listed as the administration's friends and enemies.

Auto production picks up

DETROIT (UPI) — All 44 U.S. auto assembly plants will produce cars this week, the first time since before Christmas that the industry has been able to operate at a pace even close to normal.

But, with almost 100,000 U.S. auto workers at the "Big Three" auto companies still on indefinite layoff-one-seventh of the total work force — those plants were not operating at anything approaching the capacity before the production cutbacks began.

The ending of the Arab oil embargo and a modest upswing in sales in late March were credited with the decision to keep all plants open four days this week.

Good Friday is a paid holiday for auto workers.

General Motors Corp., hardest hit by the sales slump that began last October even before the Arab oil embargo began, has 77,000 employees still on indefinite layoffs. The company is hopeful it will not have to resort to any further closings that at times reached 16 of its 24 plants.

Ford Motor Co. still has 16,275 on indefinite layoffs while Chrysler Corp., smallest of the "Big Three," has idled 12,000 indefinitely. Many of those on indefinite layoffs will not be called back to their jobs until the start of the 1975 model run in August.

Distraught Hearsts head for private rest in Mexico

• Described as fatigued and despondent, Randolph and Catherine Hearst left their suburban San Francisco home Sunday for a rest at an undisclosed destination in Mexico. Newspaper publisher Hearst repeated his belief that their daughter Patricia — kidnapped Feb. 4 by the Symbionese Liberation Army — was brainwashed into her taped statements of last Wednesday, in which she said she would stay with her abductors and "fight beside them," and described her father as a "corporate liar." After long holding that the SLA members were honorable and would stand by their word to release his daughter, Hearst said he had concluded they were "cruel people."

• Now even President Nixon's dogs have become the focus of controversy. A question has been raised by the Internal Revenue Service and Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., over how often the three dogs — King Tasha the setter, Vick the poodle and Pamah the terrier — have gotten free rides on Air Force 1. Presumably, the idea is to have the President pay fare for the pooches. His attorneys, in a letter to Sen. Long, said they've never heard of any president paying to haul the family's pets aboard official aircraft.

• British-born author-commentator

Allstair Cooke, who's become something of an institution for his cultural flow to American television, described the medium as "next to the mother and father — far ahead of school and church," in its influence on children. It has given us, he said, children with a deep visual sophistication. Beyond the influence on children, said Cooke, the "most terrifying thing" is the instant publicity that TV can give to bad news, which can then be copied anywhere in the world.

• In his annual Palm Sunday message, Pope Paul VI took aim at the world's Roman Catholic youth, urging them to bear "new and victorious witness to Christ," and to "avoid the easy ways of intellectual, spiritual and social indifference." He called on them to be willing to give their names and active support to "some militant organization in the fields of action, piety or charity."

• New word filtered out of Bangkok as one of the world's best-kept kidnappings as it was reported that one of two Russian doctors seized almost a year ago was released and returned to Moscow. The two — Dr. Boris Pianski and Dr. Stanislavsky Vengradov — were captured by Burmese rebels called the Shans at a Soviet aid project 400 mile north of Rangoon last May. They were held for either payment of $700,000 ransom or the freeing of Shan leader Khu Sa from his Rangoon jail cell. There was no immediate word on which of the two was released, or whether any of the demands were met.

In 'touch' with nature

Sociology teacher wants to take a year to lead Thoreau-like life, bring back 'fresh' ideas—now if only the school board...

by WANDALYN RICE

John McGee has one of those ideas that "makes people light up when they hear about it."

At the same time, however, it's the kind of idea that almost everyone believes is unrealistic. And so, when the Prospect High School sociology teacher decided to ask the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education for a sabbatical leave to carry it out, he says he was "pessimistic."

He went ahead and asked anyway, though, explaining, "I figured all they could do is say no — and how could I have a good idea like this and just let it rot?"

MC GEE'S IDEA is to take next year

JOHN MCGEE, sociology teacher at Prospect High School, would like to go to Wisconsin's north woods next year to work and study. The Dist. 214 Board of Education recently turned down his request for a sabbatical leave for the purpose, but McGee hopes they will reconsider.

off from his teaching job in order to move, with his wife and two small children, to a cabin he will build this summer on 40 acres of land he owns in northern Wisconsin, five miles from Lake Superior.

During that year, he says, he would live in "an intimate setting with my family on a subsistence farm." He would hold odd jobs, including perhaps working on a Lake Superior fishing boat, and would read in the field of social science with the goal of developing a list of readings for his high school sociology class.

McGee managed to get his idea past the Dist. 214 administrative committee that reviews requests for sabbaticals. It recommended to the board of education that the request be granted and the teacher be paid $6,905, $1,155 of which would be money into the state retirement fund.

The board voted 3-3 with one member absent against the sabbatical. One board member, looking at the proposal, said, "I don't see how building a summer cottage is going to help this guy teach."

REFLECTING ON THE decision, McGee says he is afraid the board "misunderstood" the proposal. "I get the feeling that they thought they would be paying me to build a house. I will definitely finish the house this summer whatever happens," he says.

When he explains how the year off will make him a better teacher, McGee refers frequently to the nature of the sociology course he teaches. "I started teaching six years ago with a master's degree in sociology," he says, "but teaching this course in high school includes so much that I feel you have to have a lot of experience yourself in order to handle it."

The course, he says, includes not just sociology, but psychology, anthropology and "teaching the students what to expect in the world."

"I feel I'm losing touch," he explains, and adds that the area in which he would live is not a resort area. "The people there hack an existence out of the woods."

ONE QUESTION he was asked when he explained his plan to the district administrators, McGee says, is why he was going to a rural area instead of an urban area. He explains that in terms of what he saw in the area last summer when he began building his house.

"I feel so much of what is going on in the suburbs is segregating people. People aren't together here. Up there, I met people who would pass up a job because they already had one good one and didn't want to take work away from someone else. That wouldn't happen here, and I think we learn about ourselves by contrast," he says.

McGee grew up in Barrington and graduated from the University of Notre Dame. He has, he says, "been a snob all my life." He says he doesn't think he would want to live all his life in northern Wisconsin — "I'm not cut out to be a woodsman all my life" — but believes the experience will be worthwhile even though "not all the risks would be there as they would if you were a full-time farmer."

His wife, he says, supports the move and has been learning how to can and preserve food in preparation. "I didn't know how much she was in favor of it until it was turned down," he says.

MC GEE WOULD LIKE to have the Dist. 214 board reconsider his request and, he says, "I would like to sit down and talk to them." He realizes the board might not want to set a precedent of giving offbeat sabbaticals since most now are granted for persons studying for higher degrees. However, he says, "If this thing would set any precedent, I hope to set up the highest possible standards."

If the board will not under any circumstances grant a sabbatical, McGee could apply for an unpaid leave of absence, but, he says, that would be hard to swing economically. Jobs are scarce and low-paying and inflation high in the area, he says, and, although he could substitute teach in the local school "that would put me back in the classroom and that's not really what I want."

Dist. 23 candidates

Battaglia: schools should be a challenge to students

A school system should strive to challenge students in order to develop a good educational program, according to Vincent Battaglia, incumbent member of the Dist. 23 school board.

"We have to make sure the children coming into our district are challenged," Battaglia says. "The administration and teachers should keep abreast of developments in education in order to do this."

Battaglia is seeking his first full term on the board. He was elected to a one-year term last April.

The candidate says he believes Dist. 23 offers a good, challenging educational program that is "well thought out."

"Because we are a small district it allows the board and the administration to be closer and know what's going on. We have a tendency to retain good teachers and this gives stability to the educational program."

THE BOARD strives to make the atmosphere in the district attractive to good teachers, Battaglia says, and this allows the teachers to operate at a level that is satisfying to them.

Although he feels the rapport with the faculty and the board is good, Battaglia says he feels negotiations with teachers should be held in private. "I don't know that open negotiations help anyone. Sometimes statements are made that don't have a purpose in negotiations and closed sessions allow complete attention to the real issues without cognizance of the public being present."

Battaglia says the biggest problem facing the district in the future is maintaining a high level of education while keeping taxes low. "The problem is whether we can keep the tax rate at the same level and continue to expand programs. With inflation, it's going to be difficult."

In spite of rising costs, however, the candidate says the district has managed to stabilize its finances. "It's getting better. We're trying to reduce our tax anticipation warrants by staying away from the frills."

BATTAGLIA SAYS some "frills" that the district tries to avoid are excessive salaries. "We have to be judicious in our spending and cognizant of our needs."

He adds that he views his role as a board member as that of being a watchdog for public funds. "The administration should examine how the district is run and the board should safeguard public funds to see that they are used wisely."

Battaglia says the district may be faced with the prospect of building a new school if land development continues. However, the incumbent says he does not believe land developers should be obligated to contribute land to a district for the purpose of building a school.

"The developer owes the district more than money. He owes the entire area a consciousness of the effect his development will have on the surrounding area."

Battaglia says he would like to see more citizen participation in district affairs but he doesn't know what, if anything, the board can do to stimulate public interest.

Although he believes the district is

EDITOR'S NOTE: Voters in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 will be called upon next week to elect two candidates for the school board. Today The Herald presents the results of those interviews.

small enough to allow the board to handle special studies, Battaglia is not adverse to the board's using citizen committees. "Anytime you have people involved, it's better than no involvement at all."

BATTAGLIA SAYS schools need outside assistance that parents can provide in such areas as fund raising, for example. PTAs can also help schools because "They can be a bellwether for problems that are developing in the district."

Battaglia says the district should expand programs and develop those that make children more aware of their surroundings. Officials should take advantage of programs developed in other districts and incorporate them into the Dist. 23 curriculum. He suggested improvement in such areas as reading and foreign language study.

The candidate also endorses the emphasis on vocational education now entering the elementary level. "The sooner children are acquainted with the types of things around them, the sooner they become aware of the world."

Battaglia says teaching children about different jobs brings them closer to the adult world and helps them understand it.

tended and I would like to see this changed. There could be more communication between the board and the community."

Horna suggests one way to increase community participation in the district is to have parents with special vocational or professional training teach mini-courses at the schools. This will not only provide the children contact with careers, but it will give the students a more positive attitude about school, Horna believes.

Horna says he does not believe teachers should have the right to strike and the concept of them doing so is frustrating. "The ripoff is on the children when teachers strike, but what other course is available to them if a board refuses to listen to them?"

AS A BOARD member Horna says he would work to avoid a conflict that would lead to a teachers' strike.

Although a teacher himself, Horna says he sees no conflict in his job as an educator and serving on the school board. "The board sets policy and it is up to the administration to carry out educational practices. I think my job provides me with certain advantages for being on the board since I am aware of school budgets and current trends in education."

"I view my role on the board as that of a parent and taxpayer who wants to know more about the district."

district's situation when making preliminary studies.

"I'm willing to cooperate with developers but only if they make an attempt to cooperate with us," Lacey says. "I also think school boards should be allowed to have a say in zoning and we have lobbied for that in Springfield."

THE CANDIDATE also is interested in holding the line on taxes within the next few years.

"We run a tight operation and we don't appreciate waste or exorbitant salaries," Lacey says. One of his aims in holding down taxes will be to reduce the amount of tax anticipation warrants sold in the district, Lacey adds.

Lacey would also like to see more citizen participation in district affairs in the future. "It's hard to get feedback from the community but we have had good results from surveys. Parents are candid and the board has taken many of their comments into consideration and implemented programs."

Lacey wants to see an independent caucus resurrected in the district. "I believe in the caucus because it provides direction." The board president says he also believes citizen advisory groups can offer help to the board on specific areas that need to be studied.

The board will continue to provide much information to the residents, Lacey says, including its policy to send home board agendas, news of special interest programs and a newsletter giving a brief wrapup of board meetings. Citizen participation at board meetings, another innovation started by Lacey, also will continue, he says.

Goodbye, Rocky

Mark Moeller's pet crow seems to be proving himself—er, herself—a neighborhood nuisance

by BOB GALLAS

Like many others, Mark Moeller's pet greets him every morning, accompanies him to school, likes to play games and even waits for his master to get out of class. However "Rocky" isn't your average household dog or cat—he's a crow.

Mark, an eighth grader at Friendship Junior High in Des Plaines, has had Rocky for almost a year, since the crow was only about a week old. However, complaints from neighbors irked at some of Rocky's antics, are forcing Mark to get rid of his pet.

A fixture around the Moeller's Des Plaines home, Rocky comes and goes as he pleases through an open window in the garage where he roosts on a ladder. Although he spends most of his day outside, Rocky returns by dark nightly to dine on his favorite delicacies—dogfood, cornflakes and peanut butter.

ROCKY WAITS, perched on overhead wires near the Moeller home every morning, waiting for Mark to leave for school. He spends half of the walk perched atop Mark's shoulder. The other half, he just flies along.

Once at school, Rocky's a hit with the other students who roll marbles which Rocky retrieves and brings back.

During the warm months, the crow will wait at an intersection near the school, waiting for his master to come by after school.

Rocky's antics, while endearing him to some, have irritated others around the block. His best trick was probably divebombing a neighbor, snatching the unsuspecting victim's keys out of his hand. Another of his favorites is to get under somebody's pantie and pull down socks or untie shoes.

ROCKY ALSO likes to divebomb the ball during a neighborhood basketball or volleyball game and takes particular delight in the tail of the Moeller's pet dog, Bambi.

Rocky, who the Moellers found out recently should be called Roxanne, also likes a little bread—soaked in whiskey. Mark said he had to discontinue the practice after Rocky got drunk.

"He was flying around sideways and divebombing everything in sight," said Mark.

ROCKY ALSO has a one word vocabulary, of "who," taught to him by Mark. "He used to bark like a dog when he was a baby because he was around the dog so much," said Mark. "He doesn't do that anymore."

A family friend will take Rocky soon, setting him free near his home in Chicago. Although it usually only happens in the movies, Mark is hoping Rocky will follow in the footsteps of Lassie, overcoming tremendous obstacles to find his way home.

IF NOT, MARK will go back to walking to school alone and the motorists along the route won't be wondering what was in their morning coffee anymore.

Although he surprised many drivers who looked twice to see what it was on Mark's shoulder, Rocky really wasn't a traffic hazard—except once.

"He was following me on my bike when he started divebombing," said Mark. "He almost caused a seven car accident."

Poe art, science fair April 30

The Poe School PTA in Arlington Heights will sponsor its annual art and science fair Tuesday, April 30, at the school, 2800 N. Highland.

Prior to the fair at 8 p.m., there will be a brief business meeting that will include election and installation of PTA officers for the 1974-75 school year.

Following the meeting, parents, students and visitors will have the opportunity to view all art and science projects.

The London Junior High School girls' volleyball team recently placed first in the district tournament.

Members of the team include Annette Colucci, Janet Higgs, Rodio Ulloa, Kathy Hyde, Margo Schoemann, Barb Wright, Sandy Rainey, Joy Adoski, Janet Altman and Kathy Kearns.

The London Junior High School jazz band received a top rating recently in competition conducted by the Illinois Elementary School Music Assn.

In the contest at Carl Sandburg Junior High School in Rolling Meadows, the London band received a division one rating making members eligible to perform at the state jazz band contest.

Cooper teacher cited by Jaycees

Joyce Gallery, Cooper Junior High School physical education teacher, has been named 1973 "Outstanding Educator of Youth" by the Buffalo Grove Jaycees.

Miss Gallery was chosen for the honor from among candidates representing each of the local schools at a dinner-dance Friday at the Old Orchard Country Club in Prospect Heights. Chairman of the physical education department at the Buffalo Grove junior high school, Miss Gallery currently also serves as athletic director at the school and is outdoor education coordinator for School Dist. 21. She is a resident of Mundelein.

Miss Gallery was awarded a $50 savings bond, a plaque for herself and a plaque for the school by the Jaycees. The other nominees received $25 savings bonds and plaques.

Meeting canceled

The Dist. 96 school board will not meet tonight as scheduled because of the upcoming school board elections.

The meeting has been rescheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday, April 15 to allow board members to canvass the results of Saturday's voting.

Dist. 23 wrapup

Schools agree to observe Memorial Day on May 30

Memorial Day will be observed on May 30 rather than May 27 in Dist. 23. The calendar change was approved by the school board Wednesday to comply with the Illinois General Assembly's change in the holiday observation.

The board also voted to set graduation ceremonies for June 12 rather than June 11 in the Hersey High School gym.

Co-op contribution OK'd

The board also voted to contribute $702 for the development of the Northwest Educational Cooperative's Sunrise Lake Camp.

NEC needs $50,000 to develop the camp and each member district has been assessed a percent of the total on the basis of how many children will be eligible to use the camp.

The camp is for special-education students. Dist. 23 has 60 students eligible to participate.

A fee of $5 per day per student will be charged for using the camp. The money forwarded by districts now will be credited toward student use of the camp, which is expected to be open this summer.

Ouch! That night hurt!

Richard E. McMahon, 19, of 206 Lonsdale Rd., Prospect Heights, probably will remember his drive home early Friday for some time.

Elk Grove Village man ticketed in accident

A 19-year-old Elk Grove Village youth was cited on two traffic counts Saturday morning when he apparently ran a stop sign on Hintz Road at Wolf Road and hit another car.

Paul Muhlenfeld, 300 Landmeier, was charged by Cook County Sheriff's Police with disobeying a stop sign and driving while under the influence. He and a passenger, Terry Kirkendall, 21, of 910 Ironwood, Mount Prospect, were treated and released at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. The driver of the second car, George Earthule, of 910 Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling, was not injured. The accident took place around 1:30 a.m.

Belly dancing, baton signup under way

Prospect Heights Park District residents may sign up for baton and belly dancing classes.

Park Director Ron Greenberg said the seven-week baton classes are held at Sullivan School, Schoenbeck and Palatine roads, on Thursdays. Intermediates will have sessions at 6:30 p.m. and beginners at 7:30 p.m. The fee is $4.

Belly dancing, also Thursday nights, will be at Hersey High School, 1900 E. Thomas St., Arlington Heights, starting April 18. Beginning classes will be at 8 p.m. and intermediate classes will be at 9 p.m., both in the school's dance room. The fee is $12 for residents and $18 for non-residents.

Registration may be made at the park district office, 13 Prospect Court (behind the Prospect Heights Public Library).

Northbrook resident injured in accident

A 21-year-old Northbrook man was in the intensive care unit of Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines Sunday from injuries sustained in an auto accident Saturday afternoon in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

Tom Prellis, of Northbrook, was reported in good condition after suffering head injuries when he apparently lost control of his car, southbound on Milwaukee Avenue, near Palatine Road around 1:30 p.m. The car crossed the median and struck a sign.

Priests was ticketed by Cook County Sheriff's police for improper lane usage. He is to appear in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court on May 13.

Horna: state should provide more money

"Elementary school is the single most important concept in education for children," says Robert Horna, candidate for a seat on the Dist. 23 school board.

Horna, a resident of the district for seven years, is a teacher at Maine South High School in Park Ridge. He says he has a twofold reason for seeking election to the board.

"I have children in the district and I am concerned with the kind and quality of the education they receive. I also want to find out how the board spends its money and the only way to do that is to be on the board."

Horna says the district is heavy in tax anticipation warrants because not enough money is being provided by the state for education. "The state should take a greater role in providing money for education. Illinois is third in the amount of money it collects in taxes but ranks in the 40s in how much is disbursed to education."

THE DISTRICT will face more financial problems if the enrollment increases due to housing developments, Horna says. The money derived from these developments will not offset the costs of educating that many more children, he says.

Horna says the curriculum in grammar school should be flexible enough to accommodate both advanced and slower students. "The individualized approach can work at the grammar school level but philosophy of teaching depends on principals and teachers," he says.

The candidate also believes that grades offer the most viable means of evaluating students. "Our hands are tied on grades because the state says there has to be some means of student evaluation. A written evaluation without grades is better but time becomes a problem. I don't know if parents would be willing to pay to give teachers more time to prepare such evaluations."

Horna says educators should also be careful in interpreting tests because so many variables may account for test results.

PARENTS AND school officials should cooperate in teaching children discipline, Horna says. "Discipline is a dual role of both the parents and the school. There cannot be an individuality of roles. Parents should be interested in their children's school work and the role of the parent has to be evident in the educational process."

Although parents should have an important role in their children's education, Horna says parents in Dist. 23 are too apathetic. "Pta meetings are poorly at-

Lacey: managers, not educators, needed

Melvin Lacey, incumbent Dist. 23 board member seeking his third full term, says he is "no less than appalled" that more people are not running in the April 13 school board election.

Lacey, who has served as board president for the past five years, says it is not necessary for a candidate to know all about education to run for the board. It is sufficient for a person seeking a board post to be community-oriented, Lacey says.

He also believes that board members should be persons with management backgrounds rather than professional educators. "As a general rule I don't think educators should be on boards because they have to deal with taxes and I don't think they can be objective in handling them," Lacey says.

LACEY SAYS the fact that teachers, for example, are union members is another reason they should, as a rule, not run for school boards. The board must act in a management position, Lacey says, and board members should thus be people in the management field.

The candidate says he is proud of some of the programs the district has incorporated in its curriculum during the years he has been on the board. The vocational and music programs are two such subjects, Lacey says.

"The vocational program teaches cooking, sewing and shop and lets the students learn how to use their hands," Lacey says. "Children should not come out of school without being able to use their hands."

Vocational education is good at the grammar school level, Lacey says, because not all children are going on to college and this type of training is, therefore, helpful.

The music program has also expanded during the past five years to include band and chorus. The jazz band, Lacey says, is one of the best in the state.

LACEY SAYS the greatest problem he foresees facing the district within the next few years is increased construction on the surrounding open space. This, he says, could lead to increased enrollment for the district beyond what it is capable of handling.

"We have sufficient capacity now to handle our students but in two years that may change," he says. "The area is subject to change because of all the open space available."

Lacey says the enrollment increase that would be created by housing developments would not only place burden on the schools but would create traffic problems in the area as well.

Lacey says he is not opposed to all developments but he believes they should be well-planned and consider the school

Look, a clean campaign!

U.S. Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III and his Republican challenger, George Burditt, are to be commended for their efforts to establish ground rules for a high-level election campaign.

Stevenson and Burditt already have agreed to a series of debates for the benefit of the public, and they have appointed personal representatives to negotiate other rules to keep the campaign within reasonable bounds.

Among the goals they have set are those which would limit campaign spending to levels less than those in effect or under consideration by Congress, and some concessions to Burditt to help him overcome the natural advantage enjoyed by Stevenson as the incumbent senator.

Skeptics may say that this cordial approach to the campaign indicates a tacit admission by both Stevenson and Burditt that the results of the election are a foregone conclusion. We have doubts that Burditt is willing to accede to that.

Be that as it may, establishment of the standards which they have agreed to negotiate could establish a precedent which candidates would be constrained to imitate in coming years.

Among the items they have agreed to discuss are:

- Limiting the maximum spending on "media expenditures" to something under the $519,000 each would be allowed under existing law.

- Agreeing to total spending of something less than the $1.135 million each would be allowed in a bill now pending before Congress.

- Voluntary relinquishment at some point in the campaign by Stevenson of his free Congressional mailing privilege.

- Allowing Burditt a spending ceiling somewhat over Stevenson's, to offset somewhat the advantages of incumbency.

While these proposals appear at first glance to contain greater concessions by Stevenson, it is also true that Burditt would be making a substantial contribution by abandoning the standard tactic for attempting to unseat an incumbent, the massive infusion of money into the campaign.

If Stevenson and Burditt can agree on these campaign limitations, it would be a step away from the disconcerting trend of selling candidates to the public on the basis of which man is able to spend the most money. With spending limitations and a commitment to high-level debates, they could present to the voters what they deserve, a campaign on the issues.

Elevation of campaign standards is sorely needed today and we commend the senator and his opponent for an imaginative approach in attempting to achieve that. We will anxiously await the results of their negotiations.

Abortion issue revived

Mr. Rosenberger's March 12 letter to the Fence Post was such a thought provoking letter that it continues to elicit remonstrance. He interprets that, "The U. S. Supreme Court did decide that a woman has a legal right to decide for herself whether or not she wants an abortion." For the sake of everyone's sanity, should the U. S. Supreme Court actually decide to regulate our thoughts, that interpretation cannot go unchallenged!

Removing it from complacent contemplation and putting it squarely into the perspective of destructive action, didn't the U. S. Supreme Court grant the velop many of the characteristics of a jackass, he, nor we, can deny his heritage. Perhaps being called "mother" by one is what so many mothers wish to avoid.

Nevertheless, the mother's right to private consultation with her physician was never in jeopardy. That was simply devious strategy to divert the emphasis from the real issue, to the highly charged emotional impact of every woman's right to this privacy. Asking first, "Who among us would be so uncouth as to violate the privacy of the consultation room?" puts this issue in proper perspective and removes it from the real issue. Ask then, "Who, but a physician, would a pregnant woman be likely to consult about her delicate condition?", helps further to clarify "issues." It is highly unlikely that a woman, suspecting that she is pregnant, would consult the plumber or an electrician. Or for that matter, expose herself for an examination to a body of the "general public" to determine her condition.

Yet, isn't that exactly what we, the general public, have been accused of doing whenever we voice an objection to the destruction of her unborn offspring? With this light on the subject, it may seem a bit silly to even discuss it, except, the fact remains that it has been used as a shroud to hide the true issue, death on demand.

It makes little difference in the finality of death, if you are killed today in the beginning of your development, or tomorrow when you can "kick" about it. It is just easier to accomplish when you can be quietly torn from the physical custody of "protective" motherhood, rather than while screaming loud and violent objection from your crib or rocking chair.

This strategy is only an updated version of the age-old con game. If you point emphatically enough in a given direction, you can get away with any number of things before attention refocused on you. Haven't you ever been the childish victim of the dinner table trick version? Brother exclaims, "Oh look!" and Sister finds the lamb chop missing from her plate when she finally looks in the right direction. Same trick, only that was for fun, abortion is for keeps.

Peace be with you

Grade shift blasted

In the March 28 Board-O-Gram, the School Dist. 54 board of education announced its proposed boundaries and plans for the next school year. Among the routine announcements is the startling news that they are planning to send the sixth grade students from Blackhawk, Campanelli and Muir elementary schools to their respective junior high schools to complete the sixth grade. Where is the reasoning here? Is this why we parents fought so hard for and voted for a referendum to allocate funds to keep situations like this from happening?

Our children are already growing up too fast. Why deprive them of the benefits, both social and educational, that the elementary school provides? Either the children will be on an island at the junior high or will be forced into a social and educational environment they are not prepared for.

I live two blocks from an elementary school. The junior high is 1 1/2 miles away (which Dist. 54 considers walking distance). I am not anxious to tackle this transportation problem when my son reaches junior high age let alone when he is in the sixth grade.

There are too many children who need their last year in an elementary school program to let this happen.

by GEORGE J. MARDER
WASHINGTON — Senate lines are drawn for one of the biggest legislative battles of the year — a showdown on no-fault auto insurance.

Major consumer lobbies representing motorists are supporting a bill to set minimum federal standards for state no-fault laws allowing auto accident victims to collect benefits without proving negligence. Victims could still sue for additional damages.

The opposition is led by the American Trial Lawyers Association.

The insurance industry is split. Supporting the legislation is the American Insurance Association, including State Farm. Opposed is the American Mutual Insurance Alliance, including All-State.

At stake are billions of dollars in auto insurance premiums, the $1.5 billion a year trial lawyers collect in auto accident cases, the welfare of injured motorists and possible relief for a clogged court system unable to handle the growing number of damage suits.

The problem is immense. Almost 30 million cars are involved in accidents each year, leaving more than 50 thousand dead and more than two million injured. The pending bill would not cover property damage although sponsors would like the state laws to include it.

It is estimated that auto accidents result in losses of $10.5 million a year but that victims recover only $6.5 billion un-

Tom Wellman's column

Mentally ill deserve help

Victims of mental illness find themselves, once again, in the middle of a controversy about the quality of the care, or the lack of it, which they receive from our public mental health establishment.

In the past, the controversy has centered around the horrors of institutional care for the mentally ill. Just as the abuses of prison life were exposed earlier in this century, the snake-pit conditions of mental institutions have always been a favorite topic for reformers.

Now, however, the base of the reform movement for mental hospitals has shifted. This time the patient's the victim of the controversy.

It seemed that, as the reformers urged improvements in our mental hospitals, the cost of caring for the mentally ill rose. And the federal government passed a law called the Community Mental Health Centers Act of 1963, which allocated funds for the construction of community facilities.

"Community care" immediately became a popular cause to the psychiatric profession. The idea was to return those inmates who had only moderately severe problems to the community, with care provided in community clinics or half-way houses.

Reformers sighed with delight at the prospect, for it emptied those snake pit hospitals of most of their patients. Politicians loved it, for it reduced state mental health budgets and allowed the closing of many state institutions.

Finally, civil libertarians loved it, for in the late 1960s a movement had erupted, a movement that stressed patients had the right not to be held in state institutions.

Indeed, community care is a good idea, for many inmates of institutions are not really sick enough to remain in a dehumanized institution in a tranquilizer-induced stupor. It could be argued that the institutional atmosphere encourages even those who are comparatively healthy to conform to the prevailing bizarre behavior in mental hospitals. In other words, you could become sicker by staying in a mental hospital.

This "good idea" assumes, however, that when you are released from a mental hospital, there are well-staffed institutions in the community to provide half-way help. But, according to press reports from across the nation, the problem is precisely that those care centers don't exist.

In New York City, patients are shuffled from state hospitals to grim, joyless welfare hotels, where they may become the prey of muggers or other New York night life. In Chicago, a fading Uptown clinic may offer only minimal care to a person just released from a state hospital.

So the psychiatric world finds itself in a perplexing struggle, centering on an idea which has not proven itself out. From reports everywhere, the victims in this case are the moderately ill patients who find themselves on a treadmill. Until strong community help is available, these persons will continue to suffer.

The problem, for us in the suburbs, is that we cannot identify with the men and women who suffer in mental hospitals or on the streets. We are generally well-educated, and if we seek psychiatric help, we can usually afford private help. To the psychiatrists, we are called YAVI's — Young, Attractive, Verbal, Intelligent and Successful — and we have the cash to pay for highly individualized psychiatric treatment.

The men and women who cannot afford such luxuries and have shuffled in and out of state hospitals are generally old, ragged, taciturn, opaque and regard themselves as failures. In our sheltered suburbs, we can choose to ignore and forget that they exist — and regard this latest dispute about mental health as perhaps an academic exercise.

Senate faces no-fault

der the present system of having to prove negligence. And that is collected unevenly.

There is no compensation in 55 per cent of the cases involving death or injury. According to Virginia Knauer, the President's consumer adviser, a government study shows small losses frequently are overpaid while large losses are underpaid.

The reason: insurance companies are not interested in laying out big legal fees fighting small claims but bring out all their big guns to fight expensive claims.

The government study also showed that the present system is expensive as well as inequitable. Out of every dollar of premiums, the motorist gets back less than 50 cents in benefits.

Letters welcome

The Herald welcomes and encourages letters from readers. Letters are published in "The Fence Post" column; no anonymous mail is considered for publication, and we will not withhold names on request. Letters in excess of 300 words are subject to condensation. Direct your mail to Herald Fence Post, P. O. Box 250, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60005.

Mrs. Knauer said that in no other system "does the payment mechanism, including the lawyer's fee, eat up so much of the benefit dollar, and leave the claimant with so little."

The trial lawyers deny their opposition to no-fault is based on the fact that roughly 20 per cent of all legal fees come from automobile accident cases. They claim it would violate the due process of the Constitution by limiting a victim's right to sue for damages.

The majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which cleared the bill by an 8-to-7 vote, rejected that view, citing workmen's compensation laws as a precedent.

In any case, defense lawyers for insurance firms would be seriously affected. Sen. Warren H. Magnuson, D-Wash., author of the measure, says a study shows that insurance rates could be lowered about $1.5 billion annually under no-fault.

Insurance company opposition is centered on the bill's provisions for unlimited medical and rehabilitation benefits. Some firms demand what they call subrogation — automatically paying victims holding policies with their companies but having insurance firms compensate each other when blame is fixed.

Supporters of the legislation argue this would defeat one of the main objectives of no-fault — bringing down premiums. (UPI)

by STEVE FORSYTH

Suburbs of Chicago and other major cities appear to be gaining friends in their struggle to obtain adequate public transportation.

The need for improved and expanded public transportation in cities and suburbs was discussed by several witnesses Friday at a hearing of the U.S. House Committee on Public Works in Chicago.

The hearing was one of six scheduled in metropolitan areas of the country to gather information before writing major public transportation legislation in Congress this year.

The six Chicago commuter railroads, represented by T. E. Desch, chairman and chief executive officer of the Rock Island Line, told the committee that buses are the most significant need in the suburbs.

THE FUTURE of public transportation in this area lies in the suburbs, Desch said, and there presently are few options for riders who must travel anywhere except to and from Chicago. Buses of all types can solve this problem, he said, but federal money will be needed to purchase the necessary equipment.

Speaking for the City of Chicago and the U.S. Conference of Mayors, Mayor Richard Daley outlined a multiple program that would be needed to meet the requirements of public transportation on a federal level, for the entire nation.

He said $3 billion a year would be needed for capital grants, $600 million a year for operating assistance and $400 million for an emergency program in 1974 alone to help expand existing transit fleets in cities and suburbs. Improvements in funding procedures and elimination of presidential impoundment of funds that have been legally appropriated by Congress also are necessary, he said.

OTHER WITNESSES who testified for the need of massive federal operating assistance in mass transportation included Chicago Transit Authority Chairman Milton Pikarsky and Jack Pahl, vice president of the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission and former president of Elk Grove Village.

Arguments in the daylong hearing rested on devoting as much federal attention and money to mass transit now as has been devoted to federal highway programs in the past 20 years.

Pikarsky said improved mass transit will relieve the nation's highways of congestion, reduce consumption of energy resources, reduce highway maintenance and patrol costs, and improve environmental quality. He said transportation must be thought of in these terms, not in terms of fare-box revenues and income deficits of its own.

Runoff retention capacity increasing in Cook County

Flood water retention capacity provided by new developments in Cook County increased tenfold last year over the 1970 level, according to the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD).

Statistics on the increased stormwater retention efforts in new developments are contained in a report issued last week by the sanitary district. The MSD began requiring stormwater retention in new developments beginning in 1972.

Retention requirements are "producing beneficial results in significantly decreasing the magnitude of storm runoff and flooding associated with new developments," MSD Chief Engineer Forrest C. Neil said last week.

An analysis of MSD data from 1969-1973 last week by The Herald found that Northwest suburbs made substantial flood control gains in the last two years but face a continuing flood threat because of past failures to provide adequate storm water retention.

The MSD report said efforts in the past two years dropped retention deficits by six to 11 times what they were before the 1972 requirements went into effect.

"The cost to correct the deficiencies of the past two years is in the order of $570,000 (for 1972) and $584,000 (for 1973) as compared to an annual cost of $4 million (for 1971) to $8.4 million (for 1969)," Neil told the sanitary district board at its meeting Thursday.

ALSO AT ITS meeting, the MSD board:

- Voted to use 610 acres of additional land in Fulton County for farming using liquid fertilizer, the sludge resulting from the MSD's digestion of sewage solids. Approval for the additional land reclamation came on Wednesday from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency. The additional acreage will increase by one third the area the MSD is reclaiming from strip-mined land for farming. The farming of the additional land had been opposed by Fulton County residents at a hearing in late February because the residents said they feared odors from the sludge and decreased property values.

- Accepted $8.38 million in federal Environmental Protection Agency funds as a partial federal grant reimbursement for sewage projects the district finances with only 33 per cent federal participation between 1966 and 1972.

- Advertised for bids on underground exploration for part of the Chicago underflow plan, including studies of land at Route 83 and the Northwest Tollway in Elk Grove Township which will be used for a retention reservoir.

- Began negotiations with the Elgin Sanitary District to allow a greater capacity of sanitary sewage from an area which includes part of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates to be treated at the Elgin Sanitary District main plant.

- Advertised for bids on an estimated $123,000 purchase of filtering materials to purify water at the Salt Creek Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg Township which is scheduled for completion in May, 1975.

- Planned to spend approximately $600,000 to buy 60 acres of easements in an unincorporated area south of Palatine between Illinois Avenue and Old Plum Grove Road. The land will be used as a basin for part of the Salt Creek Watershed Work Plan for Flood control.

Schools offer class in barbeque cooking

Several continuing education classes will be offered this spring by High School Dist. 214.

Beginning and advanced classes in dog obedience will begin at Elk Grove High School April 24. The beginning class will run from 7:45 to 8:45 p.m. and the advanced class will run from 9 to 10 p.m. Fee is $30.

Two classes in barbeque cooking will be offered Mondays and Tuesdays at Prospect High School from 7:30 to 10 p.m. The fee is $13 for four sessions.

"Pants, Panorama" demonstrating a method of slack alterations will begin Tuesday, May 2 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Hersey High School. Fee is $11.

by BOB LAHEY

Having lost the battle against passage of the Regional Transportation Authority legislation drafted by the leadership of the Illinois General Assembly, suburban opponents of the bill may win the war in securing amendments which they originally sought.

Word has seeped out of Springfield that House Speaker W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest, will himself propose amendments to the bill which he adamantly opposed prior to its approval in a referendum March 19.

Blair was one of the designers of the compromise bill agreed upon by Democratic and Republican leaders in the legislature and was a key figure in blocking any amendments to the bill agreed upon by the leadership.

He is reported, however, to be drafting a number of amendments which would nullify objections raised by opponents of the RTA proposal during a heated campaign preceding the referendum.

BLAIR'S OFFICE declined to confirm or deny that such was the case, but a spokesman for the speaker did disclose that Blair's staff is "reviewing any changes that might be made" in the bill. The Blair aide volunteered, for instance, that "we could insert language to exclude private facilities" from the vaguely defined "parking facilities" for which the bill now authorizes taxation. A frequent argument of opponents of the RTA bill was that the parking tax might be extended to private parking lots or driveways.

THE CHICAGO TRANSIT Authority will continue to portation Authority that was recently approved by voters, as the heart of the new, six-county Regional Trans- ers. (Photo by Jim Frost)

Amendments to RTA bill by Blair?

It was also reported that Blair was attempting to recruit those who opposed the RTA bill to co-sponsor the amendments which they themselves proposed prior to the referendum.

SOME OBSERVERS see the result of the March 19 primary election in Blair's district as motivation for him to seek some RTA amendments.

In Will County, where his district lies, voters opposed the RTA bill by nearly 8 to 1. In the primary election, held the same day, two Democratic candidates for the legislature made a very strong showing in the district which has traditionally been dominated by Republicans, and Blair ran ahead of the second Republican nominee only narrowly.

Legislative leaders are expected to seek to limit the spring session of the General Assembly, scheduled next week, to budgetary matters. But Rep. James (Pate) Philip, R-Elmhurst, and others who opposed the current RTA bill asked last week that a special session be convened concurrently to deal with proposed changes in the mass transit law.

Such a session could be called by Blair and Senate President William C. Harris, R-Pontiac, under terms of the 1970 Illinois Constitution.

Kids can be turned on to gardening

by MARY B. GOOD

Gardening is for grownups. At least that's how a lot of kids have it figured.

Ma's got a sacred piece of garden protecting precious seedlings, invulnerable to every living pest except the kind that accompanies the trample of tennis shoes, the buldoze of bicycles.

Dennis the Meance is hereby confined in his gardening efforts to what he gets out of science class. Or — send him away to 4-H!

Parents who segregate their gardening capers from the curiosity of their children may be investing about as much of themselves in the shared life experience as do parents who adopt a middle-aged company executive for a son. According to "Growing Up Green," a fine new book by Alice Skelley and Gloria Huckaby (Workman Publishing Co.), parents may miss the involvement, the chance to love, care for and watch over the development of a unique growing thing — their own child.

COMMON INTERESTS such as growing the family's vegetables and flowers span the generation gap and can lead to ties that last as long as they do. According to psychotherapist Dorothea Loesch, formerly with Lutheran General Hospital staff, children need a resourceful family unit that finds recreational outlets together, especially if the child is an only child, if the children live distances from playmates, are isolated, or if there is no local youth center or other place for them to go.

Make the annual spring ritual of turning over the soil a big event. Tots can work with a hand trowel, while the grade schoolers can be given a folding camp shovel or a medium-sized tool that can maneuver easily.

Pick a low risk area, away from where the kids play football or chase the dog. Make it large enough for everybody to do their thing. The kids may decide they want to plant a garden of offset colored vegetables — black radishes, purple kohlrabi, green-fleshed melon, white tomatoes, blue potatoes, purple snap beans. The seed catalogs are loaded with such offerings, notably, Gurney Seed Co. (Yankton, S. D. 57078).

IF THERE IS enough room, how about the Valley of the Jolly Green Giant — perhaps mammoth pumpkins, foot-long beans, two-pound tomatoes, yard-long cucumbers? Burbee's seed catalog (Clinton, Iowa 52732) has a "Brag Patch" special for a dollar — mammoth sunflower seeds, Jack O'Lantern pumpkin and zucchini squash.

A circus garden selection — peanuts, popcorn, watermelon, together with radish and mixed flower seeds is the children's seed collection suggestion from Olds Seed Co.'s catalog (Box 1069, Madison, Wis.) for 95 cents. Midget vegetables, like Dwarf Midget peas, Lollipop watermelon, Mighty Midget corn, Tom Thumb lettuce, Tiny Tim tomato, from Park Seed catalog (Greenwood, S. C. 29647) can be planted in patio pots by kids who live in apartments.

Or how about some interesting plants the kids have never seen before? They might like hide-and-seek husk tomatoes — the kind that are enveloped in a thin outer coat. And there are tampala, cel-tuce (a combination celery and lettuce), vegetable spaghetti, birdhouse gourds, rainbow Indian corn, cotton, etc. Brussels sprouts have a real odd growth habit, and eggplants look like bowling balls growing on bushes.

CONSIDER A playhouse made of greenery — a bean wigwam. Five or six stout poles are placed in a circle, secured in the ground and bound together at the top. String or trainnets are put all the way up. Plant pole beans around the outside which will grow up and cover the wigwam. Children will enjoy playing in it, picking the beans, and eating them.

Very small seeds, such as onion, herbs, and carrots, are hard for little fingers to plant and should be mixed with fine sand, so the kids can pour the seeds along the furrow easier. Probably seed tapes are the easiest for kids, and as an added bonus, they can be shaped and curved into designs.

To encourage children to water their plants all summer, leave their swimming trunks near the garden hose.

Show them recycling and organic gardening simultaneously, by suggesting they put their discarded apple cores, orange peels, and after-school snack remains (except greasy and sugary things) in a gallon milk carton to be added later to a compost heap.

AND DON'T forget the scarecrow!

Besides working in the garden, there are oodles of nature-oriented activities that spell family fun: water witching, for instance. Pick a forked branch (wish-bone-shaped). Hold on to the two ends of it with palms up. When you approach a source of moving water, even an underground water pipe, you feel a pull on the branch. When you are right over the water source, the branch will point straight down, even though you try your best to keep it up. Maple, apple, peach and willow branches are said to work best. Water witching works for some, not for all.

Collecting spider webs is different. Spray the web with spray paint and mount on weathered board after freeing it from its guy lines. Or spin an orb with yarn. Make your youngster a badge, "honorary spider."

Bark rubbings on the stumps of sawed-down trees with a piece of paper and charcoal, making ink block prints on paper with halves of apples, potatoes and other vegetables and fruits also produce curious results.

A GOOD GAME to enhance children's awareness of nature is to take a walk during which each family member concentrates on opening his senses to all the sights and sounds and smells around him. Lots of kids don't even know a squirrel nest from a bird's nest. They have never acquired awareness of nature or perception of the green world. (A squirrel builds a large, ragged tangle of leaves in the crotch of a tree limb. It looks tornado-stricken in its casualness.)

Too often children's encounters with nature have been negative ones — kids rounded up by scoutmasters or school teachers to fight pollution, walking on creekbeds with the emphasis more on the ugly than on the beautiful — focusing attention on the rusty beer can or the discarded mattress spring instead of the pretty creek pebbles or the interesting plant life.

TODAY, MORE and more young people are looking for tranquility in the midst of a mixed-up world. Some are turning to the land, trying to grow their own food or live off the land. Sometimes, it just doesn't work because they don't know where to even begin.

Parents have a prime opportunity to feed their children's desire to establish ties with the earth while the children are young. Gardening can develop into a life-long pursuit because gardening is a relaxing endeavor, calms the nerves, renews the spirit and is an excellent outlet for anger, hostility and frustration.

Spring comes in on little ant feet

When I told my husband we could again hear the patter of little feet, he didn't realize at first that I was talking about ants.

I suppose, if I could be objective, I would agree with him that we really have a problem. However, it has been a long winter. And since I saw my first ant before I saw my first robin, at this point any sign of spring will do.

I was explaining this to a few friends who came over for coffee Friday. We passed the time chatting and making small wagers on how fast the ants could find and carry small pieces of coffee cake from the middle of the kitchen floor back to the molding strip at the wall.

"Your ants are a lot faster than mine," Alice Flaxton observed while she watched the second hand of her watch. Alice was our official timekeeper.

"WELL, I SUPPOSE that's because they have a lot of competition around here," I said modestly.

"Yours don't seem to be as picky as mine, either," said Marianne Frickert, throwing them a raisin. "Do you know mine won't touch the cheaper breakfast cereals anymore? They insist on those empty-caloried sugar-coated kinds."

I sighed. "I just wish I could get my husband to see it that way. I keep telling him that they are remarkably well behaved and that as long as they stay off the counters and out of the cupboards and on the floor where they belong, I really don't mind having them around."

"I know what you're going through," Florie Pringle remarked sympathetically. "As soon as I get ready to leave the house in the evening for a meeting or to do some shopping, my husband declares war on our ants. Sometimes I'm tempted to stay home and intervene, but I know that whatever he does, they'll return faithfully."

"WHEN MY KIDS wanted to know why the ants always trailed close to the wall, they were shocked when I told them it was because they knew their father would step on them," I said sadly. "The problem is that our husbands just don't see ants as fascinating as they really are. At this time of year I could spend a whole day watching the troops carry a piece of potato chip across a shag rug," Marianne said dreamily.

Suddenly the back door burst open and our husbands charged in.

"Aha!" they shouted in unison. They ran around the kitchen madly, stomping on the ants that just managed to get Marianne's raisin only two tiles away from the wall.

Then, the job accomplished, the men left as suddenly as they had arrived. We all just sat there, silent for a few minutes.

It was Alice who broke the quiet with the thought that we all were turning over in our minds.

"Well," she said, "I've got to get on home... before it rains."

by JOANNE SCHREIBER

Are you fed up with time-consuming pattern alterations? Why not make your own patterns, designed for perfect fit right from the start?

No, you don't need a degree in pattern grading, construction and design. All you need is a fascinating new "Magic Fit" kit which contains a master pattern for all sizes and shapes, plus instructions, tools and paper for making your own perfectly sized patterns in many styles.

The "Magic fit" kit is the brainchild of designer Dusan Mrak, founder of the American Fashion Institute. In seminars conducted with thousands of women across the country, Mrak learned that fitting is the toughest of all sewing problems and that sewers were hungry for help.

Mrak provides that help, in the form of a basic pattern with a precise grading scale, to enable a woman to draw her own pattern according to her measurements.

This basic pattern may be used to alter commercial patterns, or it can be turned into a creative, exciting design tool. From that basic pattern, any woman can make any style she wants — a princess dress, a yoked shirt, a paneled dress, a tunic, an A-line — using materials and instructions in the kit. The secret is in the bust dart, which may be placed in many different positions to control fullness of the bodice.

THERE ARE 10 half-size patterns with which to practice bust-dart magic and you can trace off as many more as you

A MASTER PATTERN from a special kit is enlarged according to a graded scale. Tools in the kit include waist-line dart shaper, French curve for drawing necklines, armholes and sleeve caps, instruction book and instrument for making bustline darts. Women can make patterns to fit.

like. There's the master pattern with its graded scale, a French curve, bust dart and waistline dart makers to help you draw accurately, three yards of see-through nylon fabric to trace the basic pattern for yourself, and perhaps make a basic pattern for someone else who might be a completely different size and shape, and lots of crisp pattern paper to make durable patterns which you can use and re-use. The 60-page book, "Designing with Dusan," gives instructions for creating the designs, plus all the information that is usually provided in pattern instruction sheet.

Mrak admires American patterns for the confidence and know-how they have given American women, but he feels that many of us are not skilled enough to go further and create our own designs, as many European women do.

(For further information, write to Dusan Mrak, American Fashion Institute, 540 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10022.)

Better adjust wardrobe budget for higher costs

As clothing prices continue to rise, it's becoming more and more apparent that we need to plan and manage our family wardrobes and apparel budgets even more efficiently than in the past, says Marjorie Sohn, University of Illinois Extension clothing specialist.

In 1973, the average consumer spent about $329 per person on clothing and shoes — an increase of about $31 over 1972.

According to Miss Sohn, clothing manufacturers expect higher costs for fabrics and perhaps labor for the fall of 1974.

"Some men's clothing manufacturers expect to 'remerchandise' their lines to maintain price levels as much as possible," she notes. "This probably means using less fabric, and possibly less expensive fabric, and economizing on construction. Manufacturers of women's clothing have stated that they will have to raise prices and possibly eliminate lower priced lines."

MANY INDIVIDUALS find that the most efficient way to keep up with the family wardrobe and apparel budget is to have a written plan. This plan should include such things as what is currently wearable; what will be wearable for the same season of the following year; and what needs to be added for the present season or could be purchased on sale for wear the next season or year.

"Some purchases aren't planned, of course. And there is nothing wrong with an impulse buy if the purchase is used later," Miss Sohn adds. "But purchases should be planned thoughtfully. If shortages do occur, you may need to take another look at your standards of selection."

The high prices of ready-to-wear this season may make it profitable for more women (and men) to bring out the sewing machine and pickup the needle and thread.

If you have the time and space to sew, it's a very worthwhile pastime. With the new developments in patterns, fabrics and other helpful gadgets, sewing has certainly kept up with the times.

Consider the designer labels offered by pattern companies today. Butterick boasts such well-known high fashion names as Kenzo, John Kloss and Cloris Ruffin among others. McCall's has a spring catalog spiced with "As Halston sees Carefree" originals and recently added Coty Award winner Stephen Burrow's designs. Simplicity has designer fashions. Vogue carries countless numbers of originals by Yves St. Laurent, Christian Dior, Stan Herman and many more — with the recent inclusion of Carol Horne as the first designer to appear not only in the regular Vogue pattern catalog, but in the Very Easy Vogue collection as well.

THE INCLUSION of designer fashions in the pattern books makes it possible to have the latest in American and European styles for a fraction of the cost by sewing them yourself.

Carol Horne loves the idea of women sewing her designs. "Home sewers are the only ones who can refine my designs even further to suit themselves," she said.

For spring '74, coordination is the name of the sewing game. Women will want to sew pants with a blouse, with a sweater, with a blazer, so all the fabrics have been designed to work together.

There are many new highlights in sewing. Vogue and Butterick claim that their accessory patterns for hats, bags and such are best-sellers.

You asked for it and now Butterick's got it — embroidery transfer patterns for everything under the sun. The iron-on transfers can decorate almost anything you own. Patterns come with directions for stamping the motif on the fabric and instructions with diagrams for seven embroidery stitches.

EMBROIDERY TRIMS are the "in" look today, but so often when you buy them ready-made you see yourself coming and going. Once you learn the technique it's easy to personalize your own clothes. There are 30 different motifs to choose from.

Another new development is Daisy Kingdom, which specializes in sew-it-yourself skiwear. The line consists of 22 patterns for practical, high fashion skiwear.

Fashion

by Karen

All jackets have stretch panels in the backs of the sleeves and pants have powder cuffs to keep the moisture out. Also available are patterns for hats and mittens to be made from parka scraps. Daisy Kingdom also sells a complete line of waterproof (not just repellent) nylon skiwear fabrics including the new denim look.

The $27-billion-a-year apparel industry is no longer working under Phase Four wage and price controls. According to Women's Wear Daily, officials have refused to speculate on the extent of price increases now that the wholesale price of apparel has been decontrolled, noting the cost of textiles and other raw materials for the industry will determine apparel costs.

Next on the agenda

DELTA GAMMA

Northwest Suburban Alumnae Chapter of Delta Gamma has two meetings today, and members may choose the program which interests them.

The afternoon meeting is at one o'clock in the home of Mrs. Thomas Hentschel of Arlington Heights. Mrs. Hentschel, who is associated with Harper College, will speak on "Continuing Education for Women."

The evening meeting begins at 8 in the home of Mrs. Bill Stanley of Mount Prospect. The program will be a preview of spring and summer fashions by Charles A. Stevens.

New members in the area may contact Mrs. James Fortney, 825-7129, for details.

MEADOWS JUNIORS

The April meeting of Rolling Meadows Junior Woman's Club is tonight at 8 in the city hall. An election of officers is slated, and plans will be made for a scotch doubles bowling party and a car wash to support "project choir robe."

Mrs. Jack Reif, 239-2978, can be called by those interested.

LA LECHE LEAGUE

Mrs. Marge Fejes, 268 N. 9th St., Wheeling, will be hostess Tuesday at 9:45 a.m. to Buffalo Grove-Wheeling LaLeche League. Open to all interested women, the program will be on "Nutrition and Weaning." Mrs. Fejes can be called at 641-1674 for details.

OPERATING ROOM NURSES

Dr. Herbert Epstein, head of anesthesiology at Evanston Hospital, will be guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of Northwest Suburban Chapter, Association of Operating Room Nurses (AORN). He will discuss "The Effects of Anesthetic Agents on Pregnancy and Operating Room Personnel."

The meeting will be held at Lutheran General Hospital, 1775 Dempster, Park Ridge, at 7:30 p.m. in the east dining room.

DIST. 211 FACULTY WIVES

The ballots are out for Tuesday's election dinner of Dist. 211 Faculty Wives (Club "The Polls") open at 7 p.m. at Hackney's in Lake Zurich.

Candidates are Mrs. Don Froelich, Palatine, for president; Mrs. Dave Reiser, Palatine, vice president; Mrs. Lee Mulcrone, Schaumburg, secretary; and Mrs. Dennis Niedbalski, Schaumburg, treasurer.

Election "judges" are Mrs. Ken Campbell, Mrs. Donald Maddox and Mrs. Roy Houck.

PIONEER WOMEN

The next meeting of Aviva chapter of Pioneer Women is Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the home of Mrs. B. Babbitt of Arlington Heights. Guest speaker will be a collegiate member of Hahonim, the Zionist youth organization of Israel.

Those interested in the program can call 537-8778.

ARLINGTON JUNIORS

The April meeting of Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club is Tuesday, 8 p.m. at Pioneer Park Fieldhouse. It includes an election of officers.

Dr. Thomas Jauch, executive director of Northwest Human Resources Development Center in Rolling Meadows, will be guest speaker, outlining the services provided for area residents.

DENTAL ASSISTANTS

Northwest Suburban Branch of the Chicago Dental Assistants Association meet at Mount Prospect Holiday Inn Tuesday. A social hour begins at 7 p.m. and dinner at 7:30.

Marvin Helay of Baasch Dental Laboratory will speak on "Preparatory Work in Scheduling from the Laboratory's Viewpoint."

Reservations for dinner should be made 24 hours in advance by calling Mrs. Mildred Wilke, 259-4333.

ARLINGTON ASSOCIATES

The next monthly luncheon meeting of Arlington Associates (formerly the Associate Newcomers Club of Arlington Heights) will be held Wednesday at Old Orchard Country Club, Mount Prospect. Lunch will be served at 12:30, preceded by cocktails at 11:30. Tickets, at $3.50, include luncheon and cards. Guests are welcome.

Reservations are due today with Mrs. Robert Miller, 259-8327, or Mrs. Leo Lump, 439-3798.

PALATINE METHODISTS

The women of the First United Methodist Church of Palatine, 123 N. Plum Grove Road, will hold their monthly meeting Wednesday. A luncheon at 11:45 a.m. will be followed by a musical program from The Northwest Choralettes.

BJBE SISTERHOOD

A general meeting of Congregation B'nai Jehoshua Beth Elohim Sisterhood will be held Wednesday, 12:30 p.m., at the temple in Glenview.

This is an interfaith meeting with guests coming from the Woman's Club of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church. Rabbi Mark Shapiro will welcome the speaker, Father Stares of the guest church, whose topic is "Everything You Wanted to Know About Catholicism but Were Afraid to Ask."

Shirley Bolton of Des Plaines is president of the sisterhood.

Pipe or cigarettes? Best smoking advice: Give it up

If you give up cigarettes and switch to cigars or a pipe, will you be protecting your health?

Better give up smoking altogether, advises the American Lung Association (ALA). A report in the ALA's Bulletin makes this point:

"People who smoke pipes instead of cigarettes reduce some hazards to their health but increase others."

Because most regular pipe and cigar smokers don't inhale, their chances of developing coronary heart disease or severe lung diseases such as chronic bronchitis, emphysema and lung cancer are smaller than those of cigarette smokers.

When they do inhale, their chances of developing serious heart and lung diseases are even higher than those of cigarette smokers, says the ALA.

The Christmas Seal-supported association cautions about a special danger for cigarette smokers who switch. Since they have usually established patterns of inhaling, some studies show they are more likely to inhale cigar and pipe smoke than are smokers who have used these right along.

"EVEN TOBACCO smoke that is not inhaled still affects the sites it touches," says the Lung Association.

"Hot smoke lingers inside the mouth and can travel into the throat and windpipe, even into the upper breathing passages."

"Smoke — which may be dissolved in the saliva and absorbed by the mucous membranes of the mouth — can be swallowed and enter the digestive tract. Inhaling is not necessary to expose all of these sites to the harmful effects of hot smoke."

Because of such exposure, it noted, "the incidence of cancer of the mouth, throat, larynx (voicebox) and stomach are as high — and in some studies, even higher — for cigar and pipe smokers as for cigarette smokers."

"And pipe smoking, either alone or in combination with other forms of smoking, seems to be a direct cause of cancer of the lip." (UPI)

Champagne bingo night April 22

The highlight of the spring club season for Alexian Brothers Medical Center Auxiliary is a champagne bingo night Monday, April 22, at the center in Elk Grove Village.

In addition to 10 games of bingo, a fried chicken dinner — all you can eat — will be served at 6:30 p.m. Auxiliary members and friends are welcome to both or they may come just for bingo.

Champagne and cash prizes will be given for the bingo games.

Dinner tickets are $4 and include one free bingo ticket. Extra bingo tickets are $1 each or six for $5. Those wishing to purchase in advance can call Mrs. Barbara Fidler, 437-2521, but they will also be sold at the door. Guests must be at least 18 years of age.

Area newcomer club elects officers

New officers have taken over the leadership of Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Newcomers Club.

At the group's meeting in March, Mrs. DeAnn Glover was named president; Mrs. Susan Giacomini, vice president; Mrs. Karen Cullen, secretary; and Mrs. June Yates, treasurer.

They will be installed June 8 at a luncheon at Hobson House, Long Grove.

Babies and baking soda

If you have a new baby in the family, you will need baking soda about. It cleans baby, the nursery and deodorizes as it works. It is pure, safe and natural.

The many uses of baking soda in homes with infants include:

Bath: Add a handful of baking soda to baby's warm tub of water for effective washing with a minimum amount of soap.

Dentifrice: Make a paste of one tablespoon of baking soda and a few drops of water, and gently cleanse teeth and gums with dampened gauze.

Diapers: Three tablespoons of baking soda in a diaper pail full of water makes an effective pre-soak prior to laundering. It neutralizes acid.

Bibs: If baby spits up on bib or any article of clothing, treat quickly. Rub with dry baking soda. It removes odor and makes laundering easier.

Waterproof pants: Wash in a baking soda solution, rinse and dry.

Combs/brushes: Soak in a solution of baking soda and water to clean and remove body oils.

Crib: Wash with a solution of one tablespoon of baking soda per quart of water. The frame, plastic mattress cover and crib bumpers are all cleaned and deodorized without scratching.

Playpen-highchair: Absorb odors by wiping with a soda solution. Safe for baby.

Carriage: Inside and outside are washed easily with a soda solution.

Hamper: Odors are a problem here, but lessened if the hamper is swished with baking soda and water periodically.

Toys: Rinse baby's toys with a solution of baking soda and water. Any soda residue will not hurt.

Baby bottles: Put one teaspoon of baking soda in the bottle, fill with warm water, shake, rinse and sterilize.

Diaper bag: Wash in a baking soda solution to clean and deodorize.

What's new

Make way for what the manufacturer calls the world's smallest fire alarm. It plugs in anywhere, attic, furnace room, garage, bedroom. The tiny alarm with a big voice sounds when temperatures reach 135 degrees F, allowing plenty of time for effective action, the manufacturer says.

The alarm can be moved from room to room and even packs for use in motel or hotel rooms. Operates from 110 to 120 volts A. C. Plugs directly into outlet, no batteries to run down. A necessity for low cost protection against fire, says the manufacturer. For homes, offices, warehouses, stores, factories, farm buildings, hotels, schools. Price: $10.95, postpaid. Shipping weight: three ounces.

Darlene Pazier

The engagement of Darlene A. Pazier to Dennis W. Kendzior, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kendzior of Rolling Meadows, is announced by her parents, the Stanley Paziers of Westchester, Ill.

The wedding is planned for Dec. 7.

Darlene graduated from Providence High School and Morton College and is a secretary in the law office of John C. Polales. Her fiancé graduated from St. Rita High and Loyola University. He is a production control supervisor at International Telephone and Telegraph in Des Plaines.

Joyce
Abel

May 25 is the wedding date planned by Joyce Anne Abel and her fiancé, Gary Alan Waibel of Pekin, Ill. Their engagement and approaching marriage are announced by Mr. and Mrs. Anthony E. Abel, 1242 N. Chestnut Ave., Arlington Heights.

Joyce will graduate from Illinois State University a week before the nuptials. She attended Arlington High School prior to college.

Gary, son of the Glen Waibels, attended Illinois State and works for Caterpillar in East Peoria.

Gail
Newman

Mr. and Mrs. James Newman of Prospect Heights announce their daughter Gail's engagement to Max Bonecutter, son of the Paul Bonecutters of Bronson, Mich. A Sept. 14 wedding is planned.

Since graduating in 1971 from Hersey High School, Gail attended Western Illinois University and is now a junior at Northwestern University.

Her fiancé graduated from Interlocken Arts Academy in Michigan, attended Northwestern and is a professional musician and teacher.

Wrigley

Lori Jean Wrigley's engagement to James P. Fernstrom, son of the Harold Fernstroms of Palatine, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wrigley of Lee, Ill.

The bride-to-be is a senior at Illinois State University. Her fiancé, a '64 graduate of Palatine High School, works in Normal, Ill., for the First National Bank.

A June 1 wedding in Normal is planned.

NORTHWEST COMMUNITY

Michael Alan Krakora adds another son to the family of Dr. and Mrs. Alan Krakora, 1111 Kitson Drive, Palatine. Born March 29 at 8 pounds, he is the brother of 3-year-old Steven. The Daniel Passarellas of Metrose Park and Mrs. Mildred Krakora, Palatine, Ill., are his grandparents.

Kelly Dawn Matika weighed 9 pounds 11 ounces at birth April 2. She is the first daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Loye Matika, 1206 S. Wilke, Arlington Heights. Kelly has a brother, Ryan William, 2. They are grandchildren of Col. and Mrs. William F. Cruse, Culver, Ind., and the Walter G. Matikas of Chicago.

Amy Marie Kunze's birth was recorded March 29 by Mr. and Mrs. John P. Kunze, 719 Ivy Lane, Arlington Heights. She is their sixth child, a new sister for Jane, 15, Julie, 13, Steve, 12, Scott, 10, and Tommy, 6. The 8 pound 2 ounce baby is the granddaughter of the Edwin Gustafsons, Woodruff, Wis., and the Karl Kunzes, Palatine.

ALEXIAN BROTHERS

Rhonda Lee Muru arrived March 30, the first child of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Muru, 1423 Millbrook Court, Schaumburg. She weighed 9 pounds 9 ounces. Rhonda's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Muru of Rockville, Md., and the Edward Downeys, Santa Clara, Calif.

OTHER HOSPITALS

Daniel Jason Bretzmann, born March 25 in Edward Hospital, Naperville, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bretzmann, 906 E. Old Willow Road, Wheeling. The 7 pound 8 ounce is the brother of 5-year-old Debbie. Grandparents of the two are Mr. and Mrs. Don Powers, Naperville, and Mrs. Martha Bretzmann, Sheboygan, Wis.

Plant 'em together

Combine vegetable and flower gardens if you don't have space for separate ones, suggest Burpee horticulturists.

Edge a flower bed with a leaf lettuce or parsley. Or mix a few tomato and pepper plants for a touch of red among the marigolds.

If all else fails, there's still a window box or potted plants on balcony or patio.

Cupid's Deadlines:

Engagements due at least one month before wedding date.

Marriages due three weeks after wedding for complete story; five weeks after wedding for brief story.

Homemakers earn awards

Honors went to several area women at the annual meeting of Suburban Cook County Homemakers Extension Association, held March 27 at Elmhurst Country Club. Twenty-five of the 26 units were represented.

Special recognition was given Mrs. A. Schaeffer, a charter member of the Palatine unit and a past president of the Homemaker council. She has been active in the Palatine group for 33 years and all with perfect attendance.

Mrs. Marvin Duntzman, current president of the council and a member of Hanover-Schaumburg unit, opened the all-day meeting but had the assistance of several on the executive committee in giving out the awards.

Mrs. W. L. Kelly of the Des Plaines unit presented blue ribbons to the chairmen of units who complied with six requirements for efficient and knowledgeable operation. All deal with reports, representation at council meetings and training schools, and up-to-date dues.

Mrs. J. Rebel of Arlington Heights unit received the only northwest suburban unit award.

UNITS WHOSE historical books were judged best included Arlington Heights and Palatine, blue ribbons; Des Plaines and Riverview, red ribbons; and Elk Grove and East Maine, white ribbons.

A 4-H award went to Mrs. L. Berghorn of Palatine unit.

During the morning business meeting, Mrs. Leonard Dwell of Riverview unit and public information director of the council, recited the Homemaker's creed. Mrs. Wilson McFadden of East Maine gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Duntzman was named to fill a vacancy on the home economics council and Mrs. McFadden to fill a director's vacancy.

Concluding the morning, a fashion show of hats, entitled "Communications Creations," added a bit of fun to the previously serious side of the meeting.

WOMEN FROM various units modeled hats typical of the media to show the importance of acquainting the public with homemaker activities. A commentary accompanied the show.

Among the models were Mrs. H. Frindt of East Maine, wearing a radio hat; Mrs. H. Mahler, Elk Grove Village, a photo hat; Mrs. H. Nelson, Mount Prospect, newsletters; Mrs. V. Zillinger, Riverview, grapevine; and Mrs. Schaeffer, Palatine, lip service.

After lunch, Dr. Carl Mees, director of extension service in the Cook County area, presented certificates of appreciation to retiring board members. One went to Mrs. W. L. Kelly of Des Plaines unit and one to Mrs. R. Bond of Mount Prospect.

Several units volunteered for special assignments to make this annual meeting a success. Elk Grove unit members made the nametags, Des Plaines unit collected a distributed door prizes, and Riverview made the table decorations.

Lighting should illuminate, enhance

by DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

In home lighting — as in so many other things today — it's "do your own thing."

"You shouldn't worry about what's being done. Do what pleases you," says Ruth McClintock, who heads the New York showroom of Bruce Industries, Inc., maker of contemporary lamps.

"There are just two points to keep in mind. First, the basic function is illumination. And, second, your lighting should help to create an environment, and be the 'frosting on the cake,' as it were, to enhance your furniture, walls and ceilings."

Working within these two premises, the young executive says, you can achieve effective and attractive lighting based on your own ideas.

Some random suggestions:

If you feel you need light at either end of a sofa, it does not necessarily require matched table lamps. Use a table lamp and swing chain lamp, with both at eye level.

BIG LAMPS lead drama to a room;

but the bigger the lamp, the smaller the room will appear.

Another way to introduce excitement into a room is by using the bare-bulb look. These bulbs have a built-in non-glare feature and are functional as well as decorative.

How many lamps in a room? A good guideline is five lamps in a 12 by 20-foot room. Miss McClintock says. Another guide is to provide at least one lamp for every seating group.

Miss McClintock's suggestions on "which lamps for what use."

For dens, play groupings, study areas — wall lamps or swags.

For game rooms and limited space areas — pole lamps.

Other great space savers, she suggests, are tree lamps with two and even three lights, and functional floor lamps that also provide small table top space, magazine holders and various functions in addition to lighting.

For bedrooms — headboard lamps.

For dining areas — chandeliers for the traditional room or for the more casual dining area, the same effect can be achieved with ceiling pulley lamps.

IF YOU DO WANT a chandelier, Miss McClintock recommends, use it in concern with wall sconces and include a dimmer to help create a variety of moods.

The two most common faults in lighting planning, according to the Bruce executive, are the two extremes: not enough light and too much light or light flooding.

The remedy for the first is simple: Provide more illumination.

The second: Rearrange your light spacing. Use dimmers. If the lighting still is harsh, soften the effect with one or two more traditional lamps.

One final word of advice: Don't buy all opaque lamp shades since they do not transmit the maximum amount of light. Brighten the room with translucent shades or the barebulb look.

What are the most popular lamp materials?

Wood and Acrylics. Miss McClintock says, "Wood is much sought after today and has actually become a semi-precious contemporary homes. Both are durable material. Acrylics are staples in today's and easy to care for."

Oil, speed antidote for alcohol spill

Dear Dorothy: One of the children tipped over the perfume bottle on my dresser. I heard the commotion and wiped it up with a wet cloth. Even so, the area came up dried out and cracked. What can I do to this ugly spot?—Carol Kauffman

The only thing you can do now is get the area spot-refinished by a professional. The worst of all things for wood is alcohol, which many of us have discovered in living rooms after a party. That's what's in perfume. In your case it penetrated the finish and cracked open the veneer.

For your future benefit and for others, oil and speed are the vital antidotes. Indeed, one has to get to such a spill in 30 to 40 seconds. In a bedroom, grab for the face cream. Butter or margarine is good if you're close to it. Just spread the oily stuff on the spill with your fingers. The point is to quickly deactivate the action of the alcohol. Once you have accomplished this, wash the area with a mild soap solution, rinse and dry. The surface will look pale because the top sheen or wax has come off. A coat of regular polish will restore the wood to its previous gleam.

Dear Dorothy: A lovely white Banlon shirt of my husband's has yellowed. Can I dye it another color? — Marina Gut-tage

No reason why not. It probably will take gold or a darker color beautifully. Several friends have done it successfully.

Dear Dorothy: Somebody said I should store eggs with the big ends up. What's the difference? — Sally Kantor

The experts say it keeps the yolks nice.

A better way to learn languages: by telephone

by FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

Michel Lahlou has found a new use for Mr. Bell's invention. He's teaching languages by telephone at the convenience of his students.

A housewife has her lesson while lounging in a sudsy bath at home. A business tycoon takes instruction in the back of his chauffeur-driven limousine on his way to the executive suite. Office workers never leave their desks, often preferring to combine their telephone lessons with stay-in lunches.

Lahlou's patented method is the newest twist in language instruction since language records, and by all accounts more successful. Students work with a live instructor at the other end of the wire who can correct their mistakes as they go along, something impossible with records.

The innovator, a Parisian, experimented with audio-visual methods of language instruction when he taught at the Ecole Normale Supérieure de St. Cloud. Later in New York, while teaching at the United Nations' International School and the Alliance Francaise, he began experimenting with teaching by phone.

SEVERAL MONTHS ago Lahlou opened his own school, called Phonelab, in midtown Manhattan, where a staff of instructors in French, Italian, German, Spanish and Japanese man the lines. Students work out a convenient five-day-a-week telephone schedule with their teachers, who phone their students at the appointed hour on three of those days for 25-minute sessions. The student absorbs vocabulary and grammar with the aid of a printed lesson sheet through conversation, not the usual drills.

On the two alternate days, students work for 20 minutes on vocabulary, grammar and structure utilizing recorded audio techniques. The courses run a minimum of four weeks, but most students study longer. Students who know the basics of a language can begin with an intermediate or even advanced course.

"This way you speak French every day," said Lahlou. "After all, this is the way every child learns his native tongue — by hearing it and speaking it daily. You speak a foreign language two hours every week by the telephone method, compared to the few minutes you'd get to speak in the traditional multi-student classroom."

"You don't pick up pronunciation pollution from other students, and you aren't held back by their slowness. Nor are you embarrassed by the presence of other students when you make a mistake. You don't have to travel to classes, but relax anywhere you elect to take your lesson. If you miss a lesson, there's no need to 'catch up.'"

Charles Burr, a Columbia Records executive, an advanced student who tried learning French through recordings, finds the telephone method far superior.

"Records simply can't provide the encouragement of personal communications on the phone," he said. "And they can't prove the sense of triumph that occurs when the student succeeds in understanding and making himself understood. I have a sensation of a door having finally opened to me."

Execute in the open, says the senator

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., almost certainly expressed the mind of the U.S. Senate when, referring to Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, he recently told his colleagues:

"He need take no back seat to anyone in his dedication to good deeds, and in his deep concern for human kind."

Iowa's senior senator and former governor will leave the Senate in December in order to devote his life to a non-denominational lay ministry. Humphrey's tribute came immediately after Hughes had pleaded with his fellow senators:

"For God's sake, let's not be hypocrites about what we are doing! If we want to execute people then do it in the open . . . if the death penalty is to be a deterrent, the more people who see the execution, are offended by it and know that if they ever commit a similar crime they are subject to a similar penalty, the better . . . this amendment I think will offer a way for the death penalty to be a more effective deterrent to capital crime — if in fact it is a deterrent at all."

HUGHES' PROPOSED amendment directed the United States Marshal to "utilize such communication facilities, including radio and television, as may be necessary to assure the widest possible exposure of such executions at a time

by Rev. Lester Kinsojving

most likely to provide such exposure."

Florida Sen. Lawton Chiles was shocked by this amendment. "A very serious and a very dangerous thing to be shown to children. It is something they are not equipped to handle." (That very evening network television showed in prime time the superb but ghastly "Execution of Private Slovik.")

So Chiles and 80 of his fellow senators voted against the Hughes anti-concealed-deterrent amendment, which was supported by only 10 senators. Earlier in the day, all 87 Senators present had voted in favor of Sen. James Buckley's, Conservative-N.Y. amendment to prohibit execution of any expectant mothers.

While Hughes did not vote against this limited abolition amendment, his questioning of the New York Conservative produced a rather devastating exposure of Buckley, who is a devotee of the death penalty: "If a woman was pregnant awaiting execution and the baby was born prior to the date of the execution would the woman then be executed?"

Buckley: "She would then be executed."

Hughes: "Is there any provision for the mother to nurse the baby for any period of time, say 30-60 days or six months before the execution?"

Buckley: "No, but I assume the competent officials would have the humane good sense to do the right thing under those circumstances."

BUCKLEY'S AMENDMENT does not explain whether a humane official could wait until the child is weaned before executing the mother or whether it would be cruel and unusual punishment to gas, shoot, electrocute or hang the mother immediately after the umbilical cord is snapped. (When Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald Warren was asked about this, he angrily replied: "Take your question to the Senate!")

Hughes is leaving the Senate to devote his life to the service and worship of a victim of capital punishment — whose crime was regarded by authorities as worse than that of a murderer named Barabbas. The Iowa senator was no more initially successful in this opposition to state-sanctioned homicide than was another devout Christian political leader named William Wilburforce, at the beginning of what was to be a 20-year campaign to abolish the slave trade.

But Jesus Christ neither demanded nor promised his disciples instant success — only that they bear witness, as Harold Hughes has done in the Senate of the United States.

This ad is for Peter Rabbit fans. Please read it to them.

Once upon a time, the only place you could find Peter Rabbit was in a book. Lately, however, he's become a movie star. And, as if that weren't enough he's also a statuette.

Beswick of England, a division of Royal Doulton, has turned Peter Rabbit and the rest of Beatrix Potter's characters into beautifully detailed little figurines. (By the way, if you're a Winnie the Pooh man, you'll be happy to know that Beswick has done the same for Winnie and his friends.) To own a Peter Rabbit statuette, it takes very little lettuce.

We sell it for $8.50 gift packaged with a Beatrix Potter book.

Exercise benefits for double amputee

I am a double amputee. Would I benefit from bike riding (stationary bike) since only my left leg can do the pedaling? Since I have a heart condition I realize the need for exercise, but the cold weather has cut down on my attempts to walk.

Also, I have been on Coumadin for almost four years. One doctor strongly favors stopping the Coumadin — claiming there is the risk of bleeding. Several others disagree, and since I am doing well they care not to "rock the boat."

You should check with your doctor familiar with the amount of heart damage you have before embarking on an exercise program. The value of exercise comes from working the body muscles. This in turn requires the heart to work harder to deliver more oxygen to the working muscles. In a sense, exercise is used indirectly to exercise the heart muscle.

It really doesn't make any difference that you are a double amputee. If you do the same amount of physical work that would be involved in pedaling a bicycle you will work some muscles in your body the same amount. This in turn would work your heart muscle.

You might also profit from exercise devices that exercise your abdominal muscles and arm and shoulder muscles.

In short, it really doesn't matter which muscles are exercised as long as the amount of exercise is great enough to significantly work the heart muscle. This usually means that large muscle groups are the most effective, hence the emphasis on the leg-type exercises.

Regarding Coumadin to keep your blood from clotting, you won't get a unanimous agreement. There are pros and cons to both views. However, for a person who has been on the medicine for some time and has done well, I am inclined to recommend he continue. You see, I'm not inclined to "rock the boat," either.

It is my understanding that after menopause a woman cannot get pregnant two years after the last period.

I am 57 and have had two periods in the last two years, brought on by stilbestrol. Can I discount these periods brought on artificially? Or, can I still get pregnant?

In general if you are past 52 and it has been two years since you have had a natural period you are most unlikely to get pregnant. No doctor likes to say categorically that you can't, because there is always that rare exception. But, your chances are better than the woman using almost any kind of birth control measure, short of avoiding any exposure.

The artificial periods induced by stopping birth control pills for a time, or those induced by any other means don't count. They have no relation to the ovaries' functions. The main interest is in determining if the ovaries are still capable of releasing an ovum. That is not necessarily related to menstruation and has no relation to an artificially induced menstruation by pills or hormones.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Play based on opponents' bids

Oswald: "East's three diamonds bid was made to suggest a lead. If North had doubled East would have run to four clubs, a contract that would only be set one trick if West played correctly. North didn't bother to double and the spade game was reached."

Jim: "This hand is given as an example of how an alert declarer bases his play on knowledge of his opponents' bidding methods. The defense started with the ace of diamonds, a diamond ruff and the king of clubs lead. South took dummy's ace; drew trumps with two leads and discarded his last club and a heart on dummy's good diamonds. Then he ruffed dummy's last club and studied the heart suit."

Oswald: "Playing bridge in a vacuum, South would cash dummy's ace of hearts and lead a heart toward his queen. This play would work if East held the king of hearts or West held the doubleton king. In this latter case he would have to give South a ruff and a discard."

Jim: "It would also have failed miserably this time and South was sure that it would. West's two club overcall had marked him with the king of hearts. If he only held two hearts he would have held an eight-card club suit. So South entered dummy with a trump; led a low heart; stuck in his nine after East followed and poor West was end-played."

Hospital group to oppose health-care price curbs

The Illinois Hospital Assn. will "vigorously oppose" any extension of price controls on the health-care industry after April 30.

IHA, which represents 300 hospitals, said the price controls, which expire at the end of the month, discriminate against the health industry while exempting the general economy. Health care is one of the few industries still under control by the Economic Stabilization Act.

The four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have said they oppose extension of the price controls. The hospitals include Northwest Community in Arlington Heights, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Lutheran General in Park Ridge and Holy Family in Des Plaines.

COMMITTEES IN both the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives have recommended the controls not be reinstated when they expire. But efforts still are alive by the Nixon administration to continue the controls. Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Tuesday lifting the controls could cost health care consumers $14 billion more in the next two years.

IHA is launching an all-out campaign through its member hospitals to voice its opposition. Hospital employees, doctors, nurses, volunteers and trustees are being urged to write and wire their Illinois senators and congressmen.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., has notified IHA that he supports its opposition to selective controls, according to Peter Goschy, IHA president.

The IHA opposes extension of controls because quality health care cannot be sustained when hospitals cannot reflect their higher costs in higher prices, Goschy said. Hospitals and their employees, according to the IHA, can survive for only a limited time by reducing the quality of service and underpaying a reduced staff.

THE IHA contends some hospitals will be forced into bankruptcy and employees discharged if controls are not lifted. Under Phase IV controls, hospitals are limited to a 7.5 per cent increase on its charges of the previous year. Hospital employee wages are restricted to an annual pay increase of 5 1/2 per cent.

"The discriminatory controls imposed on the health care industry are unfair to hospitals and their employees," Goschy charged. "Hospitals cannot pass through in their charges the inflationary prices they must pay for goods and services. Employees must pay the same inflationary prices for clothing and food that everyone else, whose wages are not restricted, pays."

"Quality health care is at stake," he said. "Illinois hospitals are going to fulfill their responsibility to their patients and employees by opposing any legislation to extend the Act."

IN LOVING MEMORY OF ANDREA NOVY

No farewell was spoken,
Not time to say goodbye,
You were gone before we knew
And we will always wonder why.
Our hearts still ache in sadness,
Secret tears still flow
What it meant to lose you,
No one will ever know
And though it broke our hearts
To lose you
You did not go alone
For parts of us went with you,
The day God called you home.

Summer school to be tuition-free

High School Dist. 214 is again offering a tuition-free summer school at each of its eight high schools.

The first semester is June 20 through July 12. The second semester is July 15 through Aug. 2. Registration for classes will begin at each school Monday, May 6.

Two four-week sessions for driver edu-cation will be offered with the first ses-sion beginning June 17 at Elk Grove, Prospect, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling high schools. The second session will be-gin July 17 at Arlington, Buffalo Grove, Forest View and John Hersey high schools. Registration for these classes will be Tuesday, April 30 at each school.

The summer school is open to all resi-dents of the district who have graduated from eighth grade and are under 21 years of age. A $2-per-semester mate-rials fee is charged to cover textbook rental.

Incoming freshmen may enroll in the classes offered for them. Summer school information has been sent to each eighth grade student in schools sending students to Dist. 214 high schools.

Speaking about Real Estate

Robert L. Nelson
President
Robert L. Nelson, Real Estate

A look at the present Real Estate Buying and Selling Market by Robert L. Nelson, President, Robert L. Nelson Real Estate.

Much has been written about the current national Real Estate Sales Market... most of it paints a rather dismal picture... especially to those who would like to buy a home but have been scared off by the "TIGHT MONEY" situation.

Although we cannot speak specifi-cally about conditions in other parts of the country, business here in the greater Northwest Chicago Suburban area is alive, healthy and continuing to remain active.

As a matter of fact, we have been busier than usual because more and more people now realize the advantages of dealing direct with an established, professional Real Estate Company that can exert the knowledge and influence necessary to consummate a satisfying Real Estate sale.

Lending institutions have opened their doors to negotiations with the leading area Real Estate offices so that mortgage money is available. We have been able to develop this availability because of our long standing trust and reputation in the Real Estate business.

WE CAN OFFER OUR CUSTOMERS UP TO 80 FINANCING TO QUALIFIED BUYERS. Don't be scared off from buying or selling your home... if you're in the market, we're in the business. Let us show you how much help we can be in satisfying your Real Estate requirements. DON'T BE THE LOSER... DON'T WAIT! Inflation and rising costs are bound to make the home you buy today much more valuable in the next few years.

'75 car buyers' bane: lead-free gas

by LEA TONKIN

New-car buyers in the 1975 model year will have to shell out an extra $150 for a new pollution-control device that requires the use of lead-free gasoline. The no-lead gas is currently selling at an average 2 cents a gallon more than regular fuel, according to Walter MacDonald, manager of technical services for Marathon Oil Co., Findlay, Ohio.

MacDonald worries about what he calls the "lead-free gasoline dilemma." He was on hand to discuss the issue and the outlook for gasoline retailing at a meeting in Rosemont of the Chicago Oil-men's Club.

THE DILEMMA is this: by July 1, all gasoline stations that annually sell more than 200,000 gallons of gas must offer at least one grade of unleaded fuel. It's a requirement developed by the federal Environmental Protection Agency and will require an average $5,000 expenditure per station.

"The regulations are so stringent that it's almost impossible to meet," says MacDonald. "We have never faced anything like this before — where we're looking for trace contaminants."

The EPA specifies that the unleaded gasoline must be free of contaminants, especially traces of lead. According to MacDonald, a massive field testing program must be developed by oil companies to determine whether shipments to some 300,000 outlets are contaminated.

"It will pose the toughest quality control problems we've ever had in this industry," MacDonald says.

Business today

Marathon is among the major oil companies that began offering low-lead or no-lead gasoline in 1970. Many independent companies have not begun to plan for compliance with the July deadline, he says.

MACDONALD SAYS the lead-free requirement also affects the consumer. He estimates that half the nation's outlets will have the lead-free gasoline for sale when 1975 model autos come out in the fall. The autos will be fitted with gasoline caps that can accept fuel only from the special nozzle required on unleaded gasoline pumps.

The unleaded gasoline is necessary to operate the new catalytic converter pollution control devices on many of the 1975 model cars. MacDonald says the catalytic converters will cost an estimated $150 to $175 per car. "Even though the lead-free gasoline is a little more expensive to make, the automakers expect a 7 to 10 per cent increase in fuel economy," says MacDonald.

The greater economy of 1975-model cars may offset the higher prices for no-lead gas.

"If you buy a 1975 car, you'll find you have no choice. You're gonna have to buy unleaded gasoline at maybe half the stations in the United States. Your choices may be reduced," he says.

Prices are 2 cents a gallon higher for unleaded gasoline than for regular fuel, he added.

The voluntary use of low-lead or unleaded gasoline accounts for only 5 per cent of the market. "The built-in market for 1975 and beyond will mean 60 per cent of gasoline sales will be in the no-lead category by the end of this decade," the oilman predicts. Premium gas will decline from 25 to 5 per cent of the market, says MacDonald. The remainder of sales are for regular gasoline.

ANOTHER ASPECT of gas purchases is the octane rating now posted, by Cost of Living requirement, on gas pumps. The Federal Trade Commission may require the posting when the present rules are ended.

The octane rating posted on pumps is actually the average of two octane ratings — research and the motor method. The real value of the octane rating is that the motorist can buy lower octane, possibly lower-cost gasoline if his car doesn't "knock," says MacDonald.

Commenting on the supply and price outlook for the gasoline market, MacDonald says consumers can expect a 10-cent a gallon rise in gasoline prices by next fall, and the likelihood of continued tight supply. The increased flow of oil from Arab suppliers may be accompanied by added price boosts in June, he added.

Retailers offering higher prices may be forced for competitive reasons to open longer hours and offer other extra services, MacDonald adds. Commenting on the decline of windshield washing and other services, he says, "We try to encourage our dealers to continue to do all the free services. But you wonder if it will go the way of free glassware and other promotions."

Stirring effort in relay clinches title

by ART MUGALIAN

Track and Field Editor

You have to see Larry Travis to believe him.

The Hersey track coach is a compact bundle of kinetic energy. He never quits pacing and he never lets up shouting encouragement to his boys.

During the final moments of the first Mid-Suburban League indoor conference meet Friday at Wheeling, Travis was like a time bomb with a quick fuse. When Chris Cooney, Hersey's anchorman in the 12-lap relay, broke the tape in first place, Travis exploded.

"Cooney ran a 159 flat for 480 yards," exclaimed the Huskies' coach, as he checked his stopwatch one more time. "A fantastic last lap."

Hersey needed at least a fourth place in the 12-lap relay, the final event in the evening's proceedings, to stay ahead of Fremd in the team scoring, and Travis wasn't so sure his boys could do it. So when Cooney, Craig Musser, Tom Mogge, and Jay McCarthy edged Fremd, 4:08.4 to 4:08, the Huskie coach was ecstatic.

"I didn't think we'd stay anywhere near them in that relay," Travis said later. "We had our two-miler in there (McCarthy), but we ran only two seconds slower than the fastest mile relay we've ever run."

With the relay victory came the MSL indoor track crown for Hersey, the first ever awarded. The Huskies finished with 46½ points, ahead of Fremd's 40 and Schaumburg's 38.

Hersey's overall victory was achieved on the strength of wins in four events and surprising depth up and down the line. Cooney won the 880, as expected, in a superb clocking of 2:00.5, and Jim Dilenge took first place in the triple jump at 41-6, his best leap of the year. Musser edged Schaumburg's Ed Martin in the high hurdles (:06.5 to :06.6) and finished second to Martin in the lows (:06.2 to :06.3).

But Dilenge failed to qualify in the long jump and McCarthy, a definite threat in the two mile, couldn't muster a point.

"Even though some people may say that some of our kids let us down," Travis said, "those same kids came through for us later. McCarthy came back for us and he made it up in the relay. And it just may be that it's too tough to triple jump and long jump, too. Dilenge came back in the four-lap relay, though, and he passed a guy right at the finish to take a fifth for us."

Fremd had to compete without Jeff Brisson, the Vikings' top sprinter and the main cog in coach Pat Brogan's relay teams. Brisson has made the transition to baseball.

Still, the Vikings have amazing depth and they stayed in the race until the final event. Fremd's Dave Wickum grabbed first place in the 440 (53.8) and Wilson Fieldhouse ran a fine mile in 4:28 for another top spot, but the rest of the Vikings' points came farther down the line.

Paul Kenyon and Ric Inbody ran second and third for the Vikings in the 880, John Miller and Mike Rolhre finished two-three in the two mile, and Rich Sharpe placed third in the shot put.

If Fremd had gotten more points out of its pole vaulters or if they had won the relay races, the final results might have been different.

The closing minutes of the meet had Dennis Garber rehashing some of the events, too. His Schaumburg Saxons led the field for most of the evening, but they could manage only three points over the last three events. The Saxons didn't run in the 12-lap relay.

"There were so many places it was close," Garber said. "If . . . if . . . if . . ."

Schaumburg captured four first place spots, including two from Martin, the meet's only double winner. Martin took the low hurdles and the long jump (21-4). Bruce Mahlig pole vaulted 13-5½ for a first, and Arnold Jackson won the two mile run (6:43.2).

But Martin lost his specialty, the high hurdles, and an injury forced Jackson to pass up the mile.

"Jackson ran a good two miles," said Garber. "He's been hurting and he hasn't worked out in two weeks."

Conant made a strong showing for fourth place in the team scoring, getting a first from Len Olson in the 50-yard dash (:05.7) and a fourth and a third from Jeff Brandl in the two hurdles events. Doug Paape and Scott Clark placed two-three in the pole vault for the Cougars, each clearing 13 feet.

Wheeling notched a fifth spot on the strength of a first in the four-lap relay and a top high jump of 6-2 from John Lortz. The relay team of Mike Fabian, Pete Piet, Art Subrin, and Bill Frank edged second place Forest View, 1:11.3 to 1:11.6.

Forgotten in the excitement of the final events was the shot put victory of John Sloan. The Rolling Meadows senior heaved the shot 59-10, his best mark of the season and nearly nine feet farther than his closest competitor Friday night.

Sloan's top put came in his first attempt and, though none of his tosses was poorer than 57 feet, he couldn't crack the 60-foot barrier. Only Mark Stevenson of Rock Island — with a put of 60-8 — has exceeded Sloan in the state of Illinois this season.

Forest View rounded out the first division of team scoring with Craig Brinkman notching a second place in the shot put and Rick Mirro taking a runnerup spot in the 50-yard dash. Arlington got second place finishes from Craig Bernhardt in the long jump and Mike Dolanec in the 440.

The final team standings were: Hersey 46½; Fremd 40; Schaumburg 38; Conant 28; Wheeling 22½; Forest View 18; Rolling Meadows 13; Arlington 10½; Palatine 6; Prospect 3½; Elk Grove 1; Buffalo Grove 0.

After the meet, a group of happy Hersey Huskies accepted congratulations and a trophy designating them as the MSL's first indoor track champions. Larry Travis looked on, proud and excited.

"The kids really came through," said the Hersey coach. "They came back and did the job when they had to do it. I'm really happy about everybody's performance."

Contributing to Hersey's win were Mark Zakula, who took a second in the triple jump behind Dilenge, Mark Kleiner, who gained points in both hurdles races, and Ron Stephani, who captured a second place in the mile. In addition, Rich Hammersfahr grabbed a fourth in the high jump and Glenn Troy took a fourth place in the long jump.

"Not only did our number one kids hit for us," said Travis, "but our number two kids came through, too."

Travis, the little package of energy, was still going full steam.

THE ONLY DOUBLE winner in the MSL indoor conference meet at Wheeling was Schaumburg's Ed Martin, in the lead here in a hurdles preliminary. Martin won the low hurdles and the long jump and he was a close second in the high hurdles. Schaumburg finished third in the meet. (Photo by Bob Finch)

Part I: The Gary Morava Story

Young artist in demanding sport; masterpieces were taking shape

by MIKE KLEIN

Gary Morava was a special human being, a young man not like the rest. He ran the gamut from prankster to thrill seeker. From amateur artist to amateur musician. And sometime poet to world acclaimed gymnast.

But what else about this young man, who died when he was only beginning to live, makes so many people love him today? Clearly, the people who knew him honor Gary Morava.

He was a young artist whose masterpieces were just beginning to take shape. A poet who wrote his message in graceful motion. And like any great artist or poet, he was a perfectionist.

"Gary was a unique person. He thought he should be able to do anything because he was Morava," said Bill Meade, Gary's head gymnastics coach at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale.

"He's a guy that wanted to be a free spirit. Unfortunately, he was in a sport that didn't permit this type of costume. Then he happened to be associated with a coach who's an old redneck from way back and believes in discipline for the sport. And it was good. He adapted."

Gary didn't ask much of life. Just a bronze, silver or gold medal from gymnastics competition in the 1976 Toronto Olympic Games. And why the hell not? For he was Morava!

"The little son-of-a-gun used to be so involved mentally in gymnastics that he would have sleepless nights," remembered Don Von Ebers, head coach at Hersey where Morava won the 1970 Illinois high school all-around championship.

"He'd wander from one room to another. He'd lie on the floor, try a chair, a couch. One night he told me he ended up resting his head on a humidifier that had a vibration to it that helped him go to sleep. That's how intense he was in doing well."

Never was Morava satisfied with less than perfection. Gary won seventh and eighth grade YMCA all-around titles during his first years in gymnastics, then his Illinois prep all-around championship as a senior.

At Southern Illinois in Carbondale, Morava became a six-time All-American, won the 1972 NCAA long horse title and represented the United States in many international meets.

It was Morava's inner drive to overcome every hurdle that made him America's leading candidate for the 1976 Olympics. "He was learning because he'd listen," said Meade who's coached four NCAA title teams in 18 years at SIU. "He'd have been good no matter who was coaching him."

In less than 22 years, Morava won more applause, met more people and had greater thrills than anyone could rightfully expect from one lifetime. He traveled the world. At his death, Gary was just weeks away from a third trip to Russia and later competition in the South African Cup.

All of it . . . the travel, long hours of training, frustration and the many injuries he sustained . . . were endured for one reason: Win an Olympic medal.

"Gary never had an easy time in the sense that we'd get ready to go to a big meet and he'd get sick," said Meade. "But I think a lot of times it was more mental than anything else. He always wanted to do so well. That was the thing. He didn't want to just compete, he wanted to be on top."

Hersey's Von Ebers remembers Gary "had goals that were so farfetched and wayout that you couldn't believe them. He was determined Olympics was his main goal. It was unusual for a high school boy. It was fantastic. I knew when I first got Gary that he was going to be a champion."

For Fran Morava, it is a mother's remembrance. "Gary was going to be a gymnast until he was too old to do it, even if he had to live in a trailer for the rest of his gymnastics life," she said. "Gary was ready to be a gymnastics bum for as long as life would allow him to do it."

There was no filled Arena, no quiet thousands ready with wild applause for Gary Morava's final performance. There were only his Southern Illinois teammates. Not even Meade was present.

It was 2:50 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 26. Sun streaked through the large SIU Arena windows, cutting wide paths of light on the concrete gymnastics shelf.

Morava peered down at the little mink-tramp. Moments before, he'd bounced off to complete a two and three-quarter somersault, a trick which really has no value in competitive gymnastics. Now, he would try another.

But his final performance was no good. And when Morava's head cracked into the concrete, breaking the third and fourth cervical vertebrae, Stanford University's Steve Hug rested atop the pinnacle of American male gymnasts.

Totally conscious but paralyzed below the neck, Morava's lungs were useless. He employed diaphragmatic breathing as only a trained athlete could. But death was inevitable. Thirty-seven hours later, Gary Morava died.

The basement pool room of Morava's Prospect Heights home is chock full of plaques, statues, medals and ribbons, some belonging to sisters Nancy and Jayne. So many times was Gary an All-American that one of six certificates is missing.

But what of the person inside the athlete? Who was he?

They say Gary got along with everybody. He loved people and a Morava friend was a lifelong buddy.

"He was just a little squirt of a guy. He went into high school at 4-foot-10 and about 80 pounds," remembered Fran Morava. "So he had to take a lot of grief from everybody around him. He just learned to roll with the punches. I guess from being teased so much, he got sort of used to it."

"When you let everybody know finally that you're not any different, friends become really true friends."

Not any different? Gary was among the world's greatest athletes. But he disdained interviews, passed up television time and sought the private life so many celebrities never find.

"The one thing he truly detested was people walking by and saying, 'Hey, Mr. Morava!' He'd just go in the house and turn that one off," said Gary's mother.

"Or little kids walking up and saying, 'Mr. Morava, can I have your autograph?' That personal end he didn't like at all."

Eleven days before his death, Gary competed for the U. S. national team against Poland in a meet at Willowbrook High School. It was his final public performance and a great one.

There was a television interview scheduled afterwards. But it never came off. Morava ditched out. "I'm going home," Gary said. "The Christmas tree is still up. That's more important than the interview."

Arlington's girls take badminton honors in league

Champions complete perfect season with sweep of titles

It was simply no contest.

Arlington High School's powerful girls badminton team, coached by Mary Lou Hundt, rolled to the Mid-Suburban Conference championship over the weekend in competition at Schaumburg.

Arlington and Prospect finished 1-2 in the overall standings which are determined on the basis of dual meets and the conference. Arlington had 56 points heading into the league finals.

Arlington swept the three singles and four doubles championships to complete an unbeaten season at all levels.

In first singles Mary Baines beat Mara Rautenberg of Prospect 11-3, 2-0, with the second battle decided after the girls had tied 10-10.

Jean Condon of Arlington beat Jean Rezny of Prospect 11-4, 11-2 in No. 2 singles, and Nancy Cunningham of Arlington beat Palatine's Barb Pringel 11-0, 11-0 in No. 3 singles.

In doubles play Nancy Sepp and Dianne DeWitt of Arlington ruled the No. 1 action with a 15-10, 15-2 victory over Prospect's Ferguson and Winsauer.

In No. 2 doubles Sue Wray and Mary Flynn of Arlington beat Prospect's Sanders and Polzien 15-12, 15-4 and in No. 3 doubles Amy Redeen and Patty Pinski of Arlington topped Prospect's Peterson and White 15-0, 15-1. The champion's Doty Massey and Jean Kunze beat Gorr and Simon of Schaumburg in No. 4 play 15-3, 15-8.

In dual meet play Arlington completed a perfect season with 56 total points.

Trailing Arlington in the duels were Prospect and Wheeling with 39 each, Hersey with 37, Schaumburg with 34, Forest View with 32, Hoffman Estates with 24, Elk Grove and Palatine with 23, Rolling Meadows with 18, Buffalo Grove with 15, Fremd with 14, and Conant 9.

Complete team results for the conference meet and duels were unavailable.

Hinsdale Central captures tennis title at Arlington

The defending Illinois prep tennis champion — Hinsdale Central — came to Arlington Heights Saturday for the 12th annual Arlington Prep Invitational.

When the Red Devils headed back to Hinsdale late in the day, they left no doubt that they'll be the team to beat late next month in the state meet, also to be held at Arlington.

Just as they had done last year, the Devils cracked the 50-point mark with 50.5, easily taking first place.

Down the list, New Trier East was second with 39.5 and hosting Arlington had third with 32.5. The year before, Rock Island tied the Cardinals for third. This time Coach Tom Pitchford's team beat the far western players by two points.

After Rock Island came Oak Park with 21 and Fenton with 15.

The top point producers for Arlington were Paul Wei, Jon Paczkowski and Roger Lockwood. Wei and Paczkowski combined in third doubles in the early matches with Lockwood joining Wei in the later ones. All told, they rolled up five points for second place.

The team of Luke Weeg and Todd Reese teamed up to total four points in second doubles. John Yeazel and Craig Van Gorp accounted for the other 3.5 points of the doubles' 12.5 total.

New Trier had 13 points with Hinsdale Central taking 15.5.

Pitchford said he was "pleased" by the doubles teams, adding "we did real well."

Arlington might have been even more successful in singles if Paczkowski had had the chance to play outdoors prior to the meet. The Cardinals' No. 1 man, playing for the first time, accounted for only 2.5 of the singles' 20 points. However, Pitchford termed his ace's performance "good considering the circumstances."

Paczowski won one of his five eight-game matches, coming against New Trier. He lost one to Mike Blankshain, one of the top ranked players in the state, 6-0. The other three ended in ties, including a 4-4 decision to Ed Staren. The latter is considered by some the top player in the state. He finished second in the state finals last year.

Wei and Weeg brought home the most points. Wei, playing fourth singles, won three matches (8-0, 7-1 and 7-1), tied one and lost one. He is only a freshman.

Weeg, a junior, won three (6-2, 8-0 and 6-2) and lost two.

Capturing 3.5 points was Yeazel, Arlington's second singles player. This junior dropped his first three matches before winning the final two.

Reese, Lockwood and Scott Waara played in No. 6 singles with three points being taken.

Educational services at Arlington Park

A unique program of adult education and recreational services will be available to horsemen and backstretch employees at Arlington Park during the 84-day meeting, which runs from June 3 through Sept. 7, it was revealed by William A. Thayer, Jr., vice president and general manager.

Adult education classes, begun in 1972 by Harper College and High School Districts 211 and 214, will be widely expanded to include such subjects as Automobile Maintenance, Consumer Education, Arts & Crafts, Modern Music Through Participation, and Judo.

Mrs. Judy Newton of Harper College will coordinate this program, which also will offer classes in Spanish, English, Creative Stitchery, the Care and Training of the Thoroughbred (to be taught in Spanish), GED (a course in basic math and English to prepare students to take the equivalency exam for a high school diploma), and a class designed to help students pass their driver's test.

The Consumer Education class will concentrate on such items as understanding contracts for purchasing cars, credit buying, and loans, and the Modern Music Through Participation students will learn the makeup of a modern band through live demonstrations.

The Salt Creek Rural Park District will supervise a complete recreational program, starting with the Arlington Softball league, which has proved so popular over the years.

Arlington will be building tennis courts, and basketball and volleyball courts for use by backstretch personnel this season, and it is anticipated that special prices will be available on the Arlington Park Towers Hotel golf course, and that the hotel pool will be available for swimming twice a week.

The Park District also is putting together recreational programs and classes for children who will be living in the Arlington Trailer Park this summer.

Payroll Savings Plan.

Poor John. Money just seemed to slip right through his fingers. Every time he planned to stash something away, there wasn't anything left.

Then John decided to join the Payroll Savings Plan where he works. Now, an amount he specifies is automatically set aside from his check before he gets it. And invested in U.S. Savings Bonds.

Because John has become such a systematic saver, he's almost forgotten about it. When he gets around to remembering, he's going to have quite a nest egg laid away.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

If you keep forgetting to save something out of your check, join the Payroll Savings Plan and let somebody else do the remembering for you.

Take stock in America.
Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

The U.S. Government does not insure the value of Bonds. The value of Bonds may fluctuate. Bonds are a good way to save.

Details flood insurance

As spring approaches, we are hearing warnings that hundreds of Illinois communities may suffer severe flooding again this year.

Some experts predict that if additional rain raises the level of swollen rivers and streams, we may surpass last year's record when the Mississippi was in flood stage for 89 days from March through June. We all recall the widespread destruction caused by floods in Illinois last spring when property damage totaled $704 million, hundreds of persons were left homeless and scores of businesses were destroyed.

Working with other Senators from flood-prone states, we developed protection against flood damage by providing low-cost, easy-to-obtain federal insurance. But before individuals can buy the insurance, their communities must apply to the federal government and be approved as flood-prone areas eligible for coverage.

Charles H. Percy

The federal government has designated 728 Illinois communities as flood-prone. But only 112 communities have applied and been approved as eligible for coverage under the National Flood Insurance Program.

Application for participation in the program is a simple procedure. The head of any local government — mayor or village manager — may obtain an application from the Office of the Federal Insurance Administrator, Department of Housing and Urban Development, Washington, D.C. 20410. (Unincorporated areas apply through their county governments.)

To qualify for coverage, such communities are required to adopt certain minimum land-use measures to reduce or avoid the chances of future flood damage. Insurance is available within a week of application approval, and property owners may then obtain a coverage through their local insurance agent or broker.

The program covers losses from the overflow of rivers and streams from rapid accumulation of water or runoff of surface water from any source. It also covers losses from tidal flooding.

Under the program, premium rates are reasonable and coverage is comprehensive. Homes of all sizes are covered against property damage at the annual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of insurance, with home contents insured for 35 cents for each $100 of insurance. For businesses, the rate is 40 cents for each $100 of insurance, and 75 cents for each $100 of coverage for contents.

The limit of subsidized coverage is $35,000 for single-family homes and $100,000 for multi-family homes. The ceiling on coverage for contents is $10,000 for all homes and apartments. For businesses, the limit is $100,000 for both structure and contents.

Every flood-prone community in Illinois should apply now for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program. Participation in the program now can mean less hardship and loss for property owners when spring floods strike.

Illinois U.S. Senator

'Many oppose abortion'

Regarding Joe Rosenberger's letter on abortion:

Mr. Rosenberger, we offer no half-truths. We have facts and figures to prove when a baby's heart beats, when its brain functions, etc.

Twisted logic? What about your logic that as long as the person is big enough to be heard or can be seen (and can also take contraceptives) they can do away with a small life who can't defend itself, because it would be an inconvenience for them.

What about the court's decision to protect you from murderers? Are we cramming our beliefs down the murderers' throats? He thinks he's right. Or do you only go along with these decisions that protect your body?

Leaving God out of it and just using the old rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," how will you like it when under euthanasia it is decided you are "unwanted?" And please don't think euthanasia can't happen. A few years ago legalized abortion was unheard of. A few of our states already have euthanasia laws ready for a vote.

Let's practice what you preach and permit others, large and small, young and old, deformed and perfect to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness!" Women have a right over their bodies as long as it doesn't harm another person's body. What about the baby's right over its body?

When you, Mr. Rosenberger, and your self-centered kind realize who are getting abortions and if all the money spent on them was used for the development and use of contraceptives and help for those children born, you may be surprised at the good feeling it brings to help a life live rather than doing away with it.

And we are not a minority trying to fool Congress. The poll results I've seen show many Americans against abortion.

School caucus story hit

Having been intimately involved with the Dist. 21 General Caucus, I feel I must respond to the commentary of Jill Bettner published in the Monday, February 25, edition.

Ms. Bettner misrepresented the function of the caucus and then attempted to show it had lost sight of that erroneous function. As defined by caucus by-laws, our purpose is "to provide for and facilitate the nomination of qualified individuals as candidates for vacancies on the board of education." It is not, as Ms. Bettner states, our interest to stimulate great numbers to run; neither is it our interest to run a "vigorous election." But it is our interest to encourage qualified persons to consider running. And many qualified persons would not come forward, or even consider coming forward, if the caucus did not approach them.

Ms. Bettner has equated not endorsing incumbents with losing sight of our function. In stating that we could have endorsed three persons, Ms. Bettner has forgotten that we had another option: we could have endorsed none. And here is

Commission choice hit

An open letter to the mayor and the city council of Des Plaines:

O come on now, city fathers. Really! You have appointed the leader of Citizens Opposed to Low and Moderate Income Housing as the new chairman of the Housing Commission. Why didn't you just call it the NON-Housing Commission.

Would you also support Bobby Riggs as director of the Women's Athletic Association and Teddy Kennedy as chairman of the Committee for Safe Driving and what about Richard Nixon as head of the Citizens' Right to Privacy Association?

Mary Ann Randhy

Apartments criticized

The adult members of our household strongly disfavor apartment building in this area for the following reasons:

—Our water supply is nearing inadequacy. Some areas are down to a trickle already. An increase in demand will surely force us to the enormous expense of piping the contaminated, polluted waters of Lake Michigan to Mount Prospect to fulfill our needs.

—Apartments as a rule invite transients who could care less about the character of this village. The crime and fire rates have been on a sharp increase since recent apartments have been built in the area. Not only is this a threat to the well-being of the residents, but the increase in police and fire department staffs and their necessary equipment is costly to the taxpayer.

—There would be an increase in the welfare roles.

—All increased number of streets, trees, lights, etc., will require maintenance.

—Quantities more of garbage and rubbish will have to be picked up.

—The strains on the already bulging high schools will doubtless have to be relieved by the construction of another high school, which we could probably avoid if large numbers of populace are not invited into this village.

—The village roads and transportation facilities would be unbelievably congested.

One has only to imagine for a moment how a deluge of people from only one 4,500 apartment complex would affect our way of life. It seems to me it should be a simple decision to favor investing $30 a year in the Rob Roy property, because that investment will give each homeowner a huge return in savings in taxes, utility and improvement costs, convenience, esthetics, pollution and peace of mind.

Furthermore, the village of Mount Prospect should not take on the burdens of the city of Chicago, can we not see that Chicago is getting rid of its problems and giving them to us?

The homeowners have nothing to gain, but a great deal to lose, by allowing the continued construction of apartments here.

Lutheran General exhibits questioned

It has come to my attention that several hospitals will be having exhibits that will be on display at the Randhurst Shopping Center. One hospital, Lutheran General, will have a place where questions can be asked. Here are two questions you should ask 1. Did the Lutheran General exhibit cost more than $7,000? 2. Is it the sick patients at the hospital who ended up paying for this? No wonder that the hospital charges are so high.

Gas race has reader in a poetic rage

This gas race has me in a rage, I wish that I could find a sage who'd tell me how to beat the score of standing in line to buy some more; gasoline the precious fuel that has us all acting like such fools, using more gas than ever before waiting to buy to use some more, such a round robin of energy waste, another example of social disgrace, what insanity we have bred let's use our legs and bikes instead and maybe some day our good Lord will call "It looks like they're worth saving after all."

'No city manager for Des Plaines'

After carefully reading the articles in the local newspapers on a part-time mayor, no need for a city treasurer, and reduction of the city council, I have come to the conclusion that the voters of Des Plaines were all buffaloed at the last mayoral election.

Is the mayor the last of the greats, and there will never be another as good as him? Surely in a city this size there must be someone with the caliber of a good mayor.

Why do we all of a sudden need a city manager? Just because our neighboring communities have a city manager, does not mean we have to follow their way of thinking. Des Plaines has been a leader in many things in the past years, and we do not have to turn into a follower now.

Why reduce the aldermen from what they are now to only eight persons? Reducing the aldermen to eight people would be like have a dictatorial clique running the city with little or no discussion possible. Even the present city council cannot handle the problems a city this size has now, so how can eight people do it justice with fair representation.

Why at this time a city treasurer is not needed? Do the people in city government think that we are their slaves or servants? These people are duly elected by ballots to do the will of the people in their community, and I think it's about time the voters started having a hand in running the government officials and not

Pro-abortion stand hit

I find I must finally answer Joe Rosenberger, even if I'm not a great crusader. That is until now, you see Mr. Rosenberger, you made me mad.

I am tired of your name calling. In every letter you write you must resort to childish name calling. Your last letter had such adolescent words as "stupid, twisted logic, bigoted fanatics, crackpots." I wish you could state your ideas in an adult-like manner.

I am not a Roman Catholic but, my feeling against wholesale abortion is still strong. I have a more personal reason. I'm sure that if abortion had been legal some 37 years ago, I wouldn't be here today. My parents needed another child like a hole in the head. My Dad was out of a job with no prospect in sight (like a lot of men).

But the fact remains I am here and glad of it. Now Mr. Rosenberger, you might say, "big deal," if you never had been born. True, maybe I'll never give the world any great gifts, but what about my children, my grandchildren or my great-grandchildren. They might have a lot to give.

I am glad I had the right to live. I am sure my parents are glad now too, even though the future must have looked pretty black to them back then.

I was appalled to read about the proposed Federal Mortgage Foreclosure Act by which, if passed, the mortgage company would be able to take a family's home away if only one payment is missed. And only one notice would have to be sent, and this notice not necessarily received by the homeowner. I have only read about this proposed Federal Mortgage Foreclosure Act in the Chicago Daily News column of Leonard M. Groupe. I have written to my senators. Do you have any information about this act and why is it not publicized so many people know about it and can write to their senators to ask them to vote against this terrible proposed Federal Mortgage Foreclosure Act?

Reader: 'Why ratification rush for ERA?'

As a personal opinion, and in response to an article by Sylvia Margolis in last week's Herald, I should like to pass on some thoughts on ERA. Why the rush for ratification — is not the majority always right — and what will ERA give us that is not our right now under the U.S. Constitution?

Equal pay for equal work and the right to be hired for a position, if qualified, regardless of sex is the aim of all women who wish to work. However, any laws passed which would remove freedom of choice as to whether women work outside or inside the home, would erase some "equal rights" now ours. Also, if ERA is passed, it seems to some of us that we would be losing, rather than gaining, some benefits and protections. By law, we could then be forced to carry arms in a war, because the protective provision (in 14th Amendment, I think) would be removed. Conversely, men could then claim the right to remain home and "tend the home fires."

If ERA would affect only governmental jobs, as stated, then no discrepancies in private employment would be changed. If applied to teachers, then anything could be taught in our public schools, and this could be a danger. Equal pay makes sense.

Equality does not mean identical; seems this issue has been reduced to a battle between the sexes (a never-ending argument) and could blind us to the realities of what could happen with the passage of this amendment. Many of us feel that it is not passage of more laws, but the honest interpretation of existing ones that is important. Any discrepancies and inequities that may be alleviated, reduced, or erased as a result of the pros and cons of this issue are to be praised — but let's not lose our freedom in so doing.

The price of Peace and Freedom is high — (but let's not have any "German" over here.) Let us face our 200th anniversary, in 1976, as a FREE nation — united.

Zoning scandal probes turn up suspected corruption

JAMES THOMPSON

by NANCY COWGER and BOB CASEY

The massive federal investigation of corruption in Chicago and 44 suburbs is beginning to have a "domino effect," with evidence of wrongdoing turned up in one case often leading probes on to several others.

Among cases that U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office hopes to use to uncover corruption in other areas are zoning scandals in Hoffman Estates and Wheeling, The Herald has learned.

Bernard Peskin, a key figure in the Hoffman Estates case convicted Thursday of bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy, may be required to provide information in other cases under a grant of immunity from further prosecution.

THE U.S. ATTORNEY'S office plans to seek an immunity grant for Peskin, an attorney specializing in zoning matters, and obtain his testimony about approval of developments by other suburbs and by Cook County, according to a source close to the case.

The Wheeling probe resulted Jan. 31 in the indictments of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and five others on extortion and conspiracy charges. It has "opened a door" on corruption in Cook County government, another federal source said.

The Herald has learned that zoning actions by Cook County have been under scrutiny by federal investigators for several months. Asst. U. S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, head of Thompson's Special Investigations Division, confirmed that the county probe is under way but declined to comment further.

Last week's guilty verdict for Peskin, former state representative who resigned as Northfield Township Democratic committeeman just before his indictment Oct. 26, keeps Thompson's conviction record at 100 per cent in the suburban probe.

OF THE 14 PERSONS and one developer indicted so far in the investigation of corruption in 44 suburbs, seven have pleaded guilty, one has pleaded no contest, one has been found guilty and charges are pending against seven others.

Peskin's conviction by a federal jury followed earlier guilty pleas by six former Hoffman Estates officials and a plea of no contest by Kaufman and Broad, Inc., which used Peskin to funnel payoffs to village officials in 1968.

One of the six Wheeling defendants, former village trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the extortion of furniture from Wickes, Inc., for favorable zoning. Five other defendants, including Stavros, have pleaded innocent.

Also indicted in the suburban probe was Curtis C. Whittaker, mayor of south suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1968 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Faubion, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U. S. Atty. Anton Valukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoff to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park, (Continued on Page 2)

One fire district still a dream? Many believe so by JOE FRANZ A News Analysis

Buffalo Grove officials have been talking about putting the village in one fire district for more than a year, but now there seems to be some doubt when and even if this will ever take place.

According to sources in the village, officials are continuing to drag their feet on settling terms with the Wheeling Fire Protection District and get a needed referendum to put the village in the jurisdiction of one department.

The village board more than two months ago voted to support such a referendum that, if passed, would put the entire village in the Wheeling Township Rural Fire Protection District. Buffalo Grove officials say consolidating the village in one fire district will make it easier to form a municipal department.

WHILE MOST officials prefer creating a municipal department immediately, they claim village finances will not permit it. Village Mgr. Daniel Larson predicts it will be at least two years before the village has adequate tax revenues to support a municipal department.

At present, all of the Cook County section of Buffalo Grove is covered by the Wheeling district, while most of Lake County is in the Long Grove Rural Fire Protection District. A small area of undeveloped land is in the Vernon Township Rural Fire Protection District. The village board recently reached agreement with the Buffalo Grove Fire Department Inc. which is employed by the Wheeling district over procedures that would be followed after the village decides to form a municipal department. The procedures involve the transfer of equipment, firemen's salaries, personnel policies and fringe benefits.

The village is currently waiting for word from the Wheeling district over a proposed agreement concerning the transfer of real estate once a municipal department is formed.

WHEELING DISTRICT trustee Phil Ralston said Friday officials have reviewed the agreement submitted by the village and have responded in a letter. The letter, he said, asks that a meeting be arranged between the district and the village.

"I personally am not anticipating too much difficulty reaching agreement with the village," Ralston said. I think everything will be worked out. That doesn't mean, however, there won't be any problems or there won't be some points of disagreement."

A reliable source, however, told The Herald last week that the two sides are not that close to agreement and went as far as to say a pact may never be reached. According to the source, who asked to remain nameless, "The village has asked for all kinds of assurances, but does not want to commit itself to anything."

Although the agreement is not required by law in order to hold a referendum, fire officials want the sanction of the village before bringing the matter to the voters. If the village supports the referendum it will have a better chance of passing, they said.

LONG GROVE district officials oppose the referendum, saying that taking part of their area will financially damage the district. They also contend they can respond faster than the Wheeling district to certain areas.

Long Grove trustee Tony Berg said Friday, "Our position has not changed. We are opposed to annexing to the Wheeling district, but we do not oppose formation of a municipal department."

Some officials have said it should make no difference to the Long Grove District since it would lose the area and tax money no matter which route is chosen.

Last year the Long Grove district collected about $33,000 from the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove, about 40 per cent of its overall revenue.

TRUSTEE EDWARD Osmon has warned other officials that once the Lake County section of the village begins accounting for more than 50 per cent of the Long Grove district's revenue, it could be virtually impossible to disannex from that area for any reason, a municipal department included.

For that reason, Osmon has urged the quick consolidation of the village into the Wheeling district.

The village at the present time only accounts for about 25 per cent of the total revenue of the Wheeling district, and

Parents crack books

Adults learn how Individually Gifted Education program works in Twin Groves' open-space school

by JILL BETTNER

Nearly 200 parents took advantage of an opportunity to attend classes along with their children last Friday at Dist. 96's Twin Groves School in Buffalo Grove.

The purpose of the back-to-school day was to give parents an idea of how the Individually Guided Education (IGE) program works in the open space school. The IGE program, which stresses student motivation and self-direction, was adopted district-wide last year.

Teachers carried on as usual, with parents joining their children in working math problems, doing social studies research and other classroom work. A few even ventured to shake a leg along with a group of kids learning the Charleston.

"We told the teachers not to do anything different today that they usually do," said Ron Warwick, principal. "The intent of the day was not to have parent conferences, but to give parents a chance to see what their kids are doing in school."

FOR MANY parents, it was a first visit to the new school, that opened in January. It was also a first exposure to an open space building for most and the comment heard most frequently was "It's sure is different from the school I went to."

The first open-space school in the district, Twin Groves is not divided into separate classrooms like traditional schools, except for music, art and physical education classes on the first floor.

THE ENTIRE second floor of the building on Penny Lane in the Lake County section of the village is one big instructional area. Students work independently and in groups side by side in the large carpeted room that accommodates grades four through eight.

"I'm impressed that with all this going on, the kids can sit in tune with their own class," said Joanne Humphreys, 811 Essington Ln. The mother of a third grade daughter at the school, Mrs. Humphreys feels the IGE program is working well.

Although some parents said they feel the self-directed program is helping their children to learn responsibility, they expressed concern over discipline.

"I like the openness, but sometimes I feel there's a little lack of discipline," said a mother of three boys who attend the school. "I'm finding it harder to discipline them at home and many people I've talked to have said the same thing."

A FATHER agreed that his 12-year-old daughter has become reluctant to accept his authority at home since being allowed to make many of her own decisions at school.

"The kids are on their own here, which I think is good — they're learning responsibility, but I really don't feel they're getting enough discipline," said Joseph Mueller, 820 Dornell Ln.

Reacting to the parents' comments on discipline, Warwick said it is very rare for a child's behavior at school to affect his conduct at home.

"Anytime a parent says to me that school is ruining my child's behavior, I really have to question that," the principal said. "That's because 90 per cent of the time it's the other way around. I get a little irritated when people blame the school."

Warwick said he was surprised at the concern about discipline at Twin Groves. He said only two parents have complained to him about discipline matters in the three months the school has been in operation.

Teachers, the principal said, are satisfied with student behavior.

"If the teachers felt the kids' behavior was any different from that of other normal early adolescents, I think I'd have heard about it before now," he said.

Three seek two 3-yr. posts on Dist. 96 school board

Dr. David Epstein: Better communication needed

DR. DAVID EPSTEIN

James Duncan: New housing impact uncertain

Dist. 96 school board incumbent Jim Duncan of Buffalo Grove is seeking reelection because he is concerned about the impact pending developments will have on local schools.

"We've played a catchup ballgame in this district before and we're going to have to plan very carefully to make sure we can provide for the great number of children that are going to be generated by developments in the area," he said.

Duncan, 390 Springside Ln., is running for his second three-year term on the school board. He is currently a member of the finance committee and has lived in the district since 1968.

TERMINING HIMSELF "one of the pioneers who fought for the Buffalo Grove resolution" that requires local developers to contribute cash or land to school and park districts to help offset the tax impact of projects, Duncan said he plans to continue to see that builders carry their share of providing for the children they bring into the district.

Duncan anticipates a referendum for a fourth school in Dist. 96 will probably become necessary in 1976.

"Right now, we have an enrollment of 1,150 students and facilities for 2,000 which means a referendum probably sometime in 1976 for another school. If the developments go up as planned," he said. "Of course, it could be sooner — it all depends on the building."

RETAINING TEACHERS in the district is Duncan's main worry following the decision to roll back Lake County property tax assessments to 1972 levels this year. The plan will cut local school revenue by about $100,000 and teacher salaries will be frozen unless the state takes action to make up the anticipated deficit.

"I think the whole thing is a political football and we're caught in the middle," Duncan said of the Lake County Board of Review's action. "There's really nothing we can do. I'm vitally concerned that we may lose some of our very valuable staff, but in looking at the budget, they will be my number one concern and we'll do everything we can."

Duncan said another reason he is seeking reelection is because he wants to continue to serve on the board as the Individually Guided Education (IGE) program is implemented. The district is in its second year of the program which takes five years to put into full operation.

"I WAS PART of the decision to implement IGE and I want to be part of seeing it through," he said. "The administration is following the blueprint well, I think, and it seems to be working."

Duncan feels the curriculum in Dist. 96 should be tailored "so that a student is being groomed for the day he steps out into society," and added "That's the thing I like about IGE — it doesn't regiment kids into a staid-type program."

Given the money, in the future Duncan would like to see vocational arts on the junior high level added to the curriculum and an expanded athletics program at Twin Groves School.

Duncan, 40, received his bachelor's degree in 1966 from Michigan State University. He is presently employed as vice president of Chicago Kenworth, Inc. He is married, and has seven children.

Howard Falk: Future growth must be planned

HOWARD FALK

The time to start preparing for the predicted rapid growth of School Dist. 96 is now, according to Howard Falk of Buffalo Grove.

Falk, 761 Essington Ln., foresees the district doubling in size within the next five years and he is running for a three-year term on the school board because he is concerned about the accompanying problems that will affect local education.

"I want to make sure the community gets a say-so in what happens and as a member of the community, I'm very concerned," he said. "Rapid growth is expensive for the taxpayers in a school district and we have to prepare for it."

AS A COORDINATOR for the education of children with learning disabilities and behavioral problems in 16 LaGrange area school districts, Falk has had considerable experience in dealing with school boards. He feels his five years in the job has helped to acquaint him with school board operations and would make him a valuable Dist. 96 school board member.

Falk is interested in promoting better communication between district residents and the school board. He feels the board should make a greater effort to inform the public on school matters.

He suggested a newsletter from the school board to local residents as one means of keeping the public informed.

"A periodical report of some kind could point out good things and any foreseeable problems so that when problems come up, people will know what they're all about," he said. "It's important for a school board to keep in touch with the residents. Once we start saying no contact with the community, there'll be problems. The community supports the school district. It isn't the system that supports the community."

FALK SAID he would like to see an assessment of how well the Individually Guided Education (IGE) program is working in Dist. 96 sometime next year.

"We'll be at mid-point in the five-year plan then and we'll have to start looking months of operation in 1973," he said.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Village Board voted March 25 to approve a one-time, $6,000 subsidy to pay back bills and keep the Arlington Heights bus operation running through April.

The company currently operates three commuter bus lines in the village, offering rush-hour bus service to and from the Arlington Heights train station. About 250 people use the service daily.

Ridership has been steadily increasing, and Luisada has predicted that the operation could be at a break even point financially by September.

The money problem has held up the start of dial-a-bus service in Arlington Heights. The door-to-door service would operate like a taxi company during the non-rush hours.

Dist. 23 wrapup Schools agree to observe Memorial Day on May 30

Memorial Day will be observed on May 30 rather than May 27 in Dist. 23. The calendar change was approved by the school board Wednesday to comply with the Illinois General Assembly's change in the holiday observation.

The board also voted to set graduation ceremonies for June 12 rather than June 11 in the Hersey High School gym.

Co-op contribution OK'd

The board also voted to contribute $702 for the development of the Northwest Educational Cooperative's Sunrise Lake Camp.

NEC needs $50,000 to develop the camp and each member district has been assessed a per cent of the total on the basis of how many children will be eligible to use the camp.

The camp is for special-education students. Dist. 23 has 60 students eligible to participate.

A fee of $5 per day per student will be charged for using the camp. The money forwarded by districts now will be credited toward student use of the camp, which is expected to be open this summer.

Following the meeting, parents, students and visitors will have the opportunity to view all art and science projects.

Ouch! That night hurt!

Richard E. McMahon, 19, of 206 Lonsdale Rd., Prospect Heights, probably will remember his drive home early Friday for some time.

McMahon was stopped at 2 a.m. while he was driving north on Elmhurst Road near Golf Road. Mount Prospect police charged him with having a defective muffler and driving while his license was suspended. The muffler and a burned out tail light attracted the police's attention to McMahon's vehicle.

There was no charge for the tail light infraction and, after posting $100 bond, McMahon was released from the police station at 3:10 a.m.

At 3:55 a.m., a little closer to home (Burning Bush Lane and Camp McDonald Road), McMahon was stopped by another Mount Prospect policeman. He was again charged with driving while his license was suspended. Also, he got a ticket for the busted tail light.

After posting another $100 bond, McMahon was released for the second time at 4:30 a.m. He is to appear in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court on all charges May 8.

The London Junior High School girls' volleyball team recently placed first in the district tournament.

Members of the team include Annette Colucci, Janet Higgs, Rocio Ulloa, Kathy Hyde, Margo Schoemann, Barb Wright, Sandy Rainey, Joy Adoski, Janet Altman and Kathy Kearns.

The London Junior High School jazz band received a top rating recently in competition conducted by the Illinois Elementary School Music Assn.

In the contest at Carl Sandburg Junior High School in Rolling Meadows, the London band received a division one rating making members eligible to perform at the state jazz band contest.

Single fire district

the added area would not substantially change that figure. In addition, the growth in Cook County Buffalo Grove will not approach what is being planned in Lake County.

At the present time, the Long Grove District has one fire station and does not employ any more equipment as a result of its covering Lake County Buffalo Grove. However, as growth continues there, it will be forced to buy additional equipment and possibly build a new fire station.

AT THAT POINT, the district probably could argue convincingly to a court that taking away the Lake County Buffalo Grove would create a severe hardship on the rest of the district. It is then that the village could find out the sad fact that its attempts to form a municipal department will be blocked.

Thus, the village seems to be faced with the plight of not being able to afford a municipal department now and possibly not being able to form one when it has the money.

Despite Long Grove trustees' opposition to a transfer to the Wheeling district, they probably will not take the matter to court. The district probably would have difficulty proving hardship, but this could change if substantial growth in the area takes place as expected.

The most advantageous course of action for the Long Grove district is to sit back and wait and hope a referendum is not held in the near future, according to Wheeling backers.

Belly dancing, baton sign up under way

Prospect Heights Park District residents may sign up for baton and belly dancing classes.

Park Director Ron Greenberg said the seven-week baton classes are held at Sullivan School, Schoenbeck and Palatine roads, on Thursdays. Intermediates will have sessions at 6:30 p.m. and beginners at 7:30 p.m. The fee is $4.

Belly dancing, also Thursday nights, will be at Hersey High School, 1900 E. Thomas St., Arlington Heights, starting April 18. Beginning classes will be at 8 p.m. and intermediate classes will be at 9 p.m., both in the school's dance room. The fee is $12 for residents and $18 for non-residents.

Falk suggested that the evaluation be done either by the administration alone or with the help of professional education consultants.

Falk would also like to see more cooperation between the Dist. 96 school board and Dist. 125 officials. He suggested frequent meetings between the two bodies to discuss programs and ensure a smooth transition for children from elementary to high school.

A resident of the district for three years, Falk received his bachelor's degree in psychology and master's degree in guidance and counseling from Loyola University in Chicago. He has also done post-graduate work in administration, supervision and special education at Loyola, Northern Illinois and Northeastern Illinois universities.

'Lone wolf' Walser to fill a 2-year term

Also on the ballot Saturday will be Clarke Walser, 831 Twisted Oak Ln., Buffalo Grove, who is running unopposed for a two-year unexpired term on the Dist. 96 school board.

Walser was appointed by the school board in January to fill a vacancy on the board created by the resignation of former Buffalo Grove member Jack Landau. Landau resigned last fall to accept employment in Lebanon, Pa.

Active in the Kildeer Community Club before his appointment to the school board, Walser served most recently as treasurer of the organization. He also has served as vice president and program chairman of the group and was a member of the Dist. 96 Community Relations Committee.

A partner in Bacon, Whipple and Co., a Chicago investment firm, Walser is director of the investment research department. He attended the University of Chicago for two years.

Walser, his wife Nancy and four children have lived in the village for the past five years.

suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1968 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Faubion, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U. S. Atty. Anton Vahukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoffs to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park, (Continued on Page 2)

But boundary agreement may mean new problems

City officials reach accord in Mount Prospect dispute

by STEVE BROWN

Des Plaines officials have reached agreement on a settlement of the long standing boundary dispute with Mount Prospect, but the amended agreement could lead to new problems between the two towns.

The pact approved by the Des Plaines City Council differs with an agreement already passed by Mount Prospect. Mount Prospect officials must now consider passage of the amended agreement before any final settlement of a law suit between the communities is reached.

The original agreement had set Elmhurst Road as the east-west dividing line and Oakton Street as a north-south boundary for property west of Elmhurst Road. An amendment proposed by Ald. Alan Abrams (8th) eliminated the provision relating to any boundary line along Oakton Street.

ABRAMS SAID THE amendment would allow either community to annex unincorporated property along Oakton Street.

Mount Prospect Village Pres. Robert Teichert said he was a little surprised and disappointed by the amended agreement that was approved by Des Plaines.

"All I know is what we agreed to was exactly what was proposed by Des Plaines," Teichert said.

He would not predict whether or not the Mount Prospect Village Board would pass the amended agreement. He said the board will consider the agreement during an executive session Tuesday.

"The whole thrust of the agreement was to stabilize the boundary between the two towns," he added.

"JUST OFFHAND it sounds like Des Plaines is solving the immediate litigation but it doesn't resolve a potential conflict, all we are doing is setting the stage for a further battle," Teichert said.

He added, "It appears that Des Plaines wants to curl around the end of Mount Prospect's border and then try to go north."

The Des Plaines agreement came after the city council debated the issue for more than one hour and forty minutes in a closed-door executive session. Reportedly the bulk of the discussion was devoted to a contention raised by Ald. Richard War (8th) that the agreement also covered provisions which would set the unit density and the height of several multiple-family housing projects being developed along the west side of Elmhurst Road in Mount Prospect. Other city officials said that no such provisions had been agreed to in the meetings with Mount Prospect officials held last month.

IEA aid for independent hopefuls questioned again

by LINDA PUNCH

The question has again been raised about the source of support for the Concerned Citizens for Quality Education (CCQE), a group backing a slate of independent candidates for the Dist. 62 Board of Education election.

A Dist. 62 school board caucus volunteer said leaflets being distributed by the CCQE were printed at the Des Plaines office of the Illinois Education Assn. He said he asked for and received 50 copies of the flyer from the IEA office.

Jo Anderson Jr., IEA regional representative, said the IEA office "may have printed the stuff" but denied the state teachers' association is working for any local candidates.

"THE IEA HAS NO role in local politics. It's my impression that the DPEA (Des Plaines Education Assn.) has made no official endorsements," he said.

Anderson noted that some teachers are working for candidates and that individual DPEA members may have material printed at cost.

DPEA Pres. John Pacay said the IEA and DPEA haven't taken any positions in the local school board election.

"We have individual teachers who are working for the Concerned Citizens," he said. "The DPEA isn't endorsing any candidates."

PACAY SAID teachers may have material printed at the IEA office for the cost of paper and ink. He said the flyers are being paid for by the Concerned Citizens.

The teacher association president said the CCQE flyers are "exactly the same format used by the caucus." "We just give some general information on the candidates, voter registration and polling places," he said.

"I really wonder what all the problem is — the caucus is very concerned because teachers are vancassing for the independents," Pacay added.

CCQE CANDIDATES Mary Kinser and Jay Kuchel said they knew the flyers were being distributed but didn't know where the printing was done.

"We all contributed money to have them printed," Kuchel said. "Exactly where they're printed, I don't know."

When told that the flyers were printed at the IEA office, Kuchel said caucus members are "making too much of a big deal out of this thing."

"I know for a fact we have teachers working for us. Any teacher has an individual right to campaign for anybody he sees fit," he said.

"I think the caucus candidates should devote more time to speaking to the issues — how to improve relations with the teachers and custodians," he added.

'A Touch of Spring' in form of fashion

"A Touch of Spring." High Ridge Knolls School's warm-weather fashion show, will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the school, 989 Dara James, Des Plaines.

Fashions will be presented by The Robin's Nest and Just For Kids, located at Countryside Court on Elmhurst Road, near Golf Road in Des Plaines. Models will include teachers, mothers and children from the school.

A professional makeup consultant, Mary Ann Graffeo, of Syd Simons Cosmetics, Des Plaines, will be at the school that evening for anyone who wishes to know more about the art of applying makeup and other beauty tips. This is the first time the High Ridge Knolls ways and means committee has put on a fashion show. Arlene Spidale is chairman of the committee.

Tickets will be available at the door for latecomers at $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children under high school age. Refreshments will be served by the hospitality committee.

Vandals break church window

Vandals caused $300 damage at the First Baptist Church, of Des Plaines, 510 W. Golf Rd., after throwing a rock through a church window and shooting out a window on a bus with a BB gun.

According to police reports, a stained glass window on the south side of the building was broken late Wednesday or early Thursday. The bus was in a nearby parking lot, police said.

LOOKING PRETTY SPIFFY in bow tie and flared pants, Renee Orlow and Mrs. Norma Lucansky, are among the David Benton, a student at High Ridge Knolls School, models who will participate in the school's "A Touch of Spring" fashion show tomorrow night.

Order downtown apartments closed

City officials have ordered a Des Plaines landlord to close a downtown apartment building until building and zoning code violations are corrected.

The violations, which were cited for apartment units on the second-floor of a building at 1509 Ellinwood St., were found by city inspectors after police and federal immigration officials arrested 24 illegal aliens at three downtown buildings late last month.

The three buildings are located at 836 Center St., 711 Center St. and the 1509 Ellinwood St. address. Des Plaines Building Comm. William Baldacinni said the owners of the property told him they were unaware of the overcrowded conditions that existed at the three buildings.

The building at 836 Center St., which is owned by Moehling Realty Inc., has been approved for rental to a single family or no more than three unrelated persons, Baldacinni said.

He added that the apartment at 711 Center was also approved for rental after several city code violations were corrected. However the apartment at 1509 Ellinwood St. cannot be rented until it has undergone rehabilitation. Both units are owned by Peter Mandas.

BALDACINNI SAID the property owners also told him that no exorbitant rents were being charged for the three buildings.

Several of the persons arrested last month told authorities they were paying the equivalent of nearly $1,700 a month for the three buildings.

Baldacinni said Mrs. Moehling told him that she rented the house at 836 Center St. to only one family and that the renter brought in other people to help pay the rent. She said she charged only $150 for the home.

Baldacinni said the city also has ordered that two apartments in the basement of a house at 1419 Lincoln St. must be vacated. Mandas had been allowed to rent three other apartments in the house, but two basement apartments in the building were illegal.

Couple sues for $250,000

A Park Ridge couple is suing Maine Township High School Dist. 207 for $250,000 for injuries the woman allegedly received while attending adult education classes at Maine South High School.

The suit, filed in Circuit Court Monday by attorney James P. Stack, contends that Mrs. Mitchell Lamka fell in the school corridor last April 5 during evening classes. Mrs. Lamka contends the floor was excessively slippery from a wax job.

Mrs. Lamka is asking $200,000 for injuries received in the fall. Her husband is asking for $50,000 for loss of consortium.

Also named as defendants in the suit are Oakton Community College Dist. 535, Niles Township Community Dist. 219 and Cook County Supt. Richard Martwick.

Four seek two 3-yr. terms on Oakton College board

The order on ballot...

Four candidates are running for two three-year terms on the Oakton Community College Board.

Names of the candidates in the order they will appear on the ballot are:

Stephen Loska.
Harriet Ritter.
Harold Stern.
John Prochaska.

The election is Saturday. Polls will be open from noon to 7:30 p.m.

Harriet Ritter: 'Quality education for all adults'

Harriet Ritter

Harriet Ritter, candidate for the Oakton Community College board from Morton Grove, refused to be interviewed by The Herald. Instead, she has submitted some biographical data and position statements.

Mrs. Ritter has been a resident of Morton Grove for 14 years and is owner and operator of Ritter Real Estate Inc. in that village. She is a member of the Morton Grove Chamber of Commerce and League of Women Voters. She is also a member of the Illinois Women's Political Caucus.

In a prepared statement, she says her primary goal for Oakton "is quality education for all adults and serious recognition of the need of those adults who have been out of school for a number of years."

She says Oakton should offer courses for women and retired persons and says, "Oakton College should be open not only during traditional working days, but seven days a week all year long, so that those who are employed can use weekends, holidays and vacations to attend classes."

As an Oakton trustee, she says, "I would recognize the board's responsibility in selecting strong and outstanding administrators to supervise and direct the college program and to seek the best available members for the faculty."

"Also, I recognize the board of trustees' legal and moral obligation to the community, to manage the college in a sound and economical manner and to adopt curricula that are meaningful to the young high school graduates and to other adults who want to pursue college studies."

Stephen Loska: He wants to attract more local pupils

by WANDALYN RICE

Someday, Stephen Loska hopes to see one-third of all the high school graduates from Maine and Niles townships attending Oakton Community College.

"We have to realize there will always be some students who will prefer a private or public four-year education," the Des Plaines resident who has served on the Oakton board since 1971, says. But he adds, "the most inexpensive way to go to school with the least amount of output for the taxpayer is through the community college."

In order to attract more high school graduates (the college now gets about one-sixth of the graduates from the two townships) Loska says "we'll have to put the emphasis on our need to be better than we are." One way to do that, he adds, is to develop a few programs until they are outstanding.

Loska says he decided to run for reelection to the board because "the next three years will be the maturing years for Oakton. These will be the critical years."

TO GET THROUGH the rapid changes which will come as Oakton moves to its permanent campus, Loska says, "We need some specific goals." In addition to increasing the number of high school graduates who choose Oakton, Loska says he wants to see the college's vocational programs increased.

"I think our career programs are underdeveloped," he says. "We have been compromising our programs and we're trying to outguess what the state will approve." The state must approve all programs before Oakton can start them.

Another problem that has slowed the growth of Oakton's vocational programs, he says, has been lack of space. However, he thinks the college administrators "should be demanding the programs — it's the board's responsibility to provide facilities."

ALL THE COLLEGE'S programs, he says, don't have to be on the campus. "I would have been greatly pleased to see a restaurant that went bankrupt snapped up by the college for food service and hotel management," he says.

Stephen Loska

Oakton officials have had the philosophy of developing the college along innovative lines, and Loska says he approves of that, but believes "the philosophy may alter" as time passes. "A college should be a place where many attitudes can be entertained and accepted," he says. "The danger of any single philosophy is that it is contrary to academic freedom. It isn't bad to have one teacher who is effective by using methods that are traditional."

AN INNOVATION Loska would like to bring to Oakton involves the sports program. "I would like to see a push for mixed varsity sports," he says. "I see no reason why we have to develop girls' tennis teams and boys' tennis teams."

He would also like to adjust the sports program for the part-time student, he says, and to de-emphasize conference competition. "I would like to see the day when all teams have records of four and four," he says. "I would like to see students have the joy of team competition."

Loska says he sees differences between the residents of Maine and Niles townships, but does not believe rivalry between the two townships has to hurt the college. "We have differences of opinion because of our life values," he says, "but this doesn't hinder us from working as a group."

Loska, of 1694 Van Buren Ave., Des Plaines, is a senior scientist for Krafco Corp. He has seven children.

John Prochaska: 'Keep geographical balance on board'

by KATHERINE BOYCE

John Prochaska says he's running for the Oakton Community College board of trustees to maintain the balance of Maine Township's representation on the board.

This year two of the three seats held by trustees from Maine Township on the seven-man board are up for election, Prochaska, 504 N. Redfield Ct., Park Ridge, says he decided to run when he heard that one of the trustees was not going to seek reelection. Prochaska was an unsuccessful candidate for the board last year.

Prochaska feels there should be a "geographical balance on the board." If he had not run this year he says Maine Township would "lose by default one member of the board."

Some people in Maine Township feel Niles Township tends to dominate the college board, says Prochaska. Niles township's "population is 20,000 persons larger than Maine Township." Maine Township is a "fairly conservative community" in contrast to Niles Township which is liberal, says Prochaska.

IF MAINE Township lost its representation on the Oakton board, Prochaska says, "there are people in Park Ridge who would hit the streets with petitions to get out of the district." He says his candidacy is intended to "forestall that type of thing."

Trustees should represent their local community, says Prochaska. When people want to present an issue to the board, they go to their local board member, says Prochaska. "I consider myself the local community tie," he says.

Prochaska approves of the college's selection of a permanent campus in Maine Township along the Des Plaines River. "It's about the only one left," he says and he's glad the site is large. "I wouldn't particularly like to see a massive high-rise campus," says Prochaska who prefers a "prairie campus."

The fact that the river site is in the Northwest corner of the college district is not an overwhelming handicap for people living in Niles Township, says

John Prochaska

Prochaska. The predominate traffic flow on roads leading to the campus is eastward and Niles Township residents will be going west to the site, he says. Public transportation should also be improved in the college district so students could take a bus to the campus instead of driving their own car, he says.

ONCE THE COLLEGE is located on the new site, Prochaska feels its name should be changed. Oakton was "obviously named after the street," he says, and "the name wouldn't be appropriate when it is no longer on Oakton Street. We could name it after somebody important in the field of education."

Oakton's goal in the next few years should be to raise its academic standards, says Prochaska, and he thinks the state should play a part in setting academic standards for all community colleges to insure that credits will transfer to state universities.

Prochaska admits that he is "not really that familiar" with Oakton's innovative grouping system, an interdisciplinary grouping of academic subjects as opposed to a departmental system. The trouble with innovation is that it tends to "alienate most of the traditionally minded people," he says. "Innovation for innovation's sake isn't necessarily good."

Prochaska, 30, is senior internal auditor at the Keebler Co., Elmhurst. He has a master's degree in business administration in finance and accounting from Northern Illinois University.

Rabbi Harold Stern: 'College should be way to better life'

by KATHERINE BOYCE

"Education is more than reading, writing and arithmetic. It is a way toward a constructive life," says Rabbi Harold Stern, candidate for the Oakton Community College board.

Rabbi Stern thinks the role of the community college is to provide this way toward a better life for all people in the community whether they are housewives returning to school, men who want retraining or additional training for a job, recent high school graduates who want to stay in the community for the first two years of their college education, or students who want only two years of training in a particular job skill.

Rabbi Stern is particularly concerned with the needs of older returning students. "There are many women in my congregation who are looking for something to do now that their children are gone," he says.

OFTEN THESE men and women are dissatisfied, become depressed and turn to their clergyman for guidance, says the rabbi. The community college should be a place where the clergyman can refer them. It should be a place where they can get the skills they need to shift their goals in life, he says.

Rabbi Stern doesn't think Oakton has tapped the resources of the clergy enough. The college should work more closely with the clergy and all community groups and should make its programs more well-known to the general public. "If the college really want out and publicized this, it would be more effective. This is something that has to be solved," he says.

Rabbi Stern doesn't look at his position as rabbi of the B'nai Emenah Congregation in Skokie as either an asset or a liability in his campaign for the board, but he does think it will give him an advantage as a board member if elected. "I have the eyes of the community. I know what's going on in the community. I have made a lot of friends who trust me as a teacher and an educator," he says.

THE RABBI quickly points out that he is not running as the representative of just the people in his congregation, or as a representative of the residents of Niles Township. "I'm not running as a Niles Township board member. I just happen to live there," he says.

If the board were made up of aldermen and he could only run as a representative from Skokie, Rabbi Stern said the seat on the board "would not have attracted me."

Rabbi Stern has publicly come out against Oakton's choice of a permanent campus. "I'm holding out for a reversal of what seemed to be the philosophy of choosing the site," says Rabbi Stern. College officials had a preconceived notion of what the campus should look like, he says. They wanted a large campus and so they rejected all the small sites, he says. The rabbi says he favors a high-rise campus, a "tower of learning," on the small site of the temporary campus in Morton Grove.

THE SITE CHOSEN by the Oakton board is in the Northwest corner of the college district and "is not going to attract many people who live in Lincolnwood or Skokie," says Rabbi Stern. People want convenience, he says. "When people choose the church or synagogue of their choice they choose the closest one."

Rabbi Stern, 50, of 9309 N. Tripp, Skokie, has a master's degree in philosophy from the University of Nebraska, was ordained at the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York and is now a doctoral candidate at Northwestern University. He has been with the B'nai Emenah Congregation for 15 years.

THE EMPHASIS on youthful appearance has meant a study increase in customers for Keith Bachtell, the owner of Keith's Ltd.

Trying to recapture youth can be a hairy experience

Youth-oriented men are getting further ahead these days because of a switch to hairpieces.

"Hair is the thing today. If you haven't got it you look outdated, older," said Keith Bachtell, owner of Keith's Ltd., a combination hairstyling business and men's hair replacement studio.

Bachtell is prospering from the search for the youthful, dominant image that has escaped millions of men because they are bald or have thin hair. He obliges his customers by fitting them with hairpieces that suit their personality and lifestyles.

HIS DES PLAINES business caters to suburbanites-on-the-go. He matches man to rug, taking into account the type of work he does, what kind of physical activities he participates in and what social circles he revolves around.

"Hair is the main feature in a man's appearance. It frames the face. A hairpiece is like wearing a new suit. It can change a man's whole attitude toward life."

Bachtell explained that a good hairpiece is one nobody notices.

"The only hairpieces seen on the street are done improperly or worn wrong," he said. "That's why people get a bad impression of hairpieces. The nice stuff is never seen. Eighty per cent are so good nobody knows one is being worn."

The hair business has been good to Bachtell (it's been doubling every month for the past few months) and he said he strives to return the favor. "I'm dedicated to the idea that the work I do should be done right," he said.

THAT WORK includes styling, custom designed hairpieces, hair bonding and the services and repairs needed to upkeep his products once they are sold, that is, cleaning and reshaping hairpieces.

The bonding method is becoming popular and Bachtell is pushing the Apollo Hair Bond to his customers, though he makes a concerted effort to find the alternative that best suits the individual customer.

Basically, the bonding method consists of attaching hair to hair. The base of the hairpiece is round mesh with hair around that. With a crochet needle the fake hair is attached to the real hair.

The cost of this method is between $250 and $500 depending on the quality of the hairpiece used, said Bachtell. It takes anywhere from 2 to 2½ hours to put on and is expected to last a couple of years, if it is cared for properly. It costs another $15 to have the hairpiece rebonded every six weeks to two months. This process takes about 30 minutes.

AS THE DEMAND for hairpieces has grown so has the material used to make them. Two years ago, said Bachtell, 90 per cent of all hairpieces were made from human hair. Today, 80 per cent are made from synthetic materials, which lasts longer and wears better than human hair.

Bachtell, who also wears a hairpiece, is secretary of the Hair Goods Institute for Men of America, and his statistics show that $200 million worth of hairpieces were sold in this country last year with estimates ranging up to $1 billion by 1980.

And when more men get wind that such personalities as Burt Reynolds, Lorne Greene and thousands of other celebrities have resorted to wearing hairpieces sales their desirability will probably increase dramatically.

Two city patrolmen change assignments

Two Des Plaines policemen will be transferred from the department's patrol division to duties with the youth and detective bureaus, Police Chief Arthur Hintz announced last week.

Hintz said Ptl. James Kautz will be reassigned to the detective division while Ptl. James Pickell will be moved into the juvenile division.

Kautz, 26, who has spent nearly four years on the force will fill the vacancy left by Det. Robert Zeimet, who retired recently.

Pickell, 35, is also a four-year force member.

Hintz was unable to say when the officers will assume their new posts but said reassignment dates will be announced soon.

Zoning scandal probes turn up suspected corruption

JAMES THOMPSON

by NANCY COWGER
and BOB CASEY

The massive federal investigation of corruption in Chicago and 44 suburbs is beginning to have a "domino effect," with evidence of wrongdoing turned up in one case often leading probes on to several others.

Among cases that U S Atty James Thompson's office hopes to use to uncover corruption in other areas are zoning scandals in Hoffman Estates and Wheeling. The Herald has learned.

Bernard Peskin, a key figure in the Hoffman Estates case convicted Thursday of bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy, may be required to provide information in other cases under a grant of immunity from further prosecution.

THE U.S. ATTORNEY'S office plans to seek an immunity grant for Peskin, an attorney specializing in zoning matters, and obtain his testimony about approval of developments by other suburbs and by Cook County, according to a source close to the case.

The Wheeling probe resulted Jan. 31 in the indictments of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and five others on extortion and conspiracy charges. It has "opened a door" on corruption in Cook County government, another federal source said.

The Herald has learned that zoning actions by Cook County have been under scrutiny by federal investigators for several months. Asst. U.S. Atty Samuel Skinner, head of Thompson's Special Investigations Division, confirmed that the county probe is under way but declined to comment further.

Last week's guilty verdict for Peskin, former state representative who resigned as Northfield Township Democratic committeeman just before his indictment Oct. 26, keeps Thompson's conviction record at 100 per cent in the suburban probe.

OF THE 14 PERSONS and one developer indicted so far in the investigation of corruption in 44 suburbs, seven have pleaded guilty, one has pleaded no contest, one has been found guilty and charges are pending against seven others.

Peskin's conviction by a federal jury followed earlier guilty pleas by six former Hoffman Estates officials and a plea of no contest by Kaufman and Broad, Inc., which used Peskin to funnel payoffs to village officials in 1963.

One of the six Wheeling defendants, former village trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the extortion of furniture from Wickes, Inc., for favorable zoning. Five other defendants, including Stavros, have pleaded innocent.

Also indicted in the suburban probe was Curtis C. Whittaker, mayor of south suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1963 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Faubion, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U.S. Atty Anton Valukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoffs to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park. (Continued on Page 2)

Township resident facing murder charge in slaying

An Elk Grove Township man was charged with murder yesterday in the gun-slaying of his daughter's boyfriend.

Cook County Sheriff's Police charged Daniel Torres, 37, of 2445 E. Higgins Rd., with the murder of Hector Cardona, 24, of 3079 S. Canal St., Chicago.

According to Sgt. Frank Grossman, Cook County Sheriff's Police received a call around 2 a.m. Sunday from Elk Grove Village Police. When an Elk Grove patrolman arrived on the scene he found Cardona sprawled across the doorway of the trailer on Lot 16 of the Higgins Trailer Park. Cardona had been shot three times in the upper torso and was already dead when Elk Grove police arrived.

According to Grossman, Torres said upon questioning that Cardona had been dating Torres' daughter. Torres had found out that Cardona was a married man and an argument between the two ensued. Apparently Torres shot Cardona during the confrontation with a .25-caliber automatic pistol.

TORRES WAS charged with murder yesterday afternoon after an investigation by the sheriff's police. The Palatine Police Department assisted the investigation by supplying interpreters. Both men and witnesses to the slaying were Spanish-speaking.

Torres is being held without bond at the Cook County Sheriff's Police office. A bond hearing will be held this morning in Niles Court. A court date of April 16 has been set.

Det. John Smith of the Cook County police said it was a difficult investigation because of the language barrier.

An Elk Grove Village patrolman said yesterday this is the first time in 15 years there has been a homicide in the Elk Grove area.

Youth counseling on the increase

The number of individual counseling sessions with young people in Elk Grove Township is increasing according to monthly reports submitted by Paul Paprocki, Elk Grove Township director of youth services.

Paprocki said in February he handled 52 individual counseling sessions in contrast to the 67 sessions held in March.

Phone conversations from young people totaled 82 in February, and went up to 113 in March.

Paprocki, who spends time at the Palatine Township-sponsored The Bridge, which offers telephone and personal help to young people, said the number of youths who came to The Bridge for assistance has increased also.

In February, 21 people came to The Bridge for assistance while Paprocki was on duty. In March there were 54.

Robbery suspect freed on bond

Luco Pavone, 19, of 88570 Ahrens St., Lombard, is free on $15,000 bond and must appear in Niles Felony Court April 24 to answer a charge of attempted armed robbery.

Pavone was arrested April 2 by Elk Grove Village Police who charged him with the March 22 attempt to rob the Sun Drug Store in the Elk Grove Shopping Center on Biesterfeld Road.

Police said Pavone allegedly threatened an employee of the store with a revolver and asked for narcotics and cash, but ran out of the building when the employee questioned him.

A police artist working with witnesses in the store created a composite picture of the suspect, identified later as Pavone, said Elk Grove Village Det. Robert Canary.

New Centex proposal gains planners' approval

The Elk Grove Village Plan Commission has approved revised plans for a 102-acre single-family residential project to be located west of Ill. Rte. 53.

Earlier rejection of initial plans by both the plan commission and village board necessitated the revisions. Centex Construction Co. Inc. is the developer.

The approval of the "preliminary" plan for 320 single-family homes does not pass the proposal to the village board for action immediately, however.

Centex Builders must bring in a "tentative plan," one with more explicit detail for the plan commission's review April 18 before it can take the proposal to the village board for its action.

Planners' review system 'unique'

The Elk Grove Village Plan Commission operates under what it terms a "unique" system regarding its review of a builder's proposal for development.

Plan commission chairman Richard McGreener said the system is a sensible approach to planning.

Builders first submit a "concept" or general idea of how they plan to develop.

If this concept meets with the commission's approval,

Goodbye, Rocky

Mark Moeller's pet crow, to the disgust of his neighbors, has proven itself to be the nuisance of Des Plaines

by BOB GALLAS

Like many others, Mark Moeller's pet greets him every morning, accompanies him to school, likes to play games and even waits for his master to get out of class. However, "Rocky" isn't your average household dog or cat — he's a crow.

Mark, an eighth grader at Friendship Junior High in Des Plaines, has had Rocky for almost a year, since the crow was only about a week old. However, complaints from neighbors irked at some of Rocky's antics, are forcing Mark to get rid of his pet.

A fixture around the Moeller's Des Plaines home, Rocky comes and goes as he pleases through an open window in the garage where he roosts on a ladder. Although he spends most of his day outside, Rocky returns by dark nightly to dine on his favorite delicacies — dogfood, cornflakes and peanut butter.

ROCKY WAITS, perched on overhead wires near the Moeller home every morning, waiting for Mark to leave for school. He spends half of the walk perched atop Mark's shoulder. The other half, he just flies along.

Once at school, Rocky's a hit with the other students who roll marbles which Rocky retrieves and brings back.

During the warm months, the crow will wait at an intersection near the school, waiting for his master to come by after school.

Rocky's antics, while endearing him to some, have irritated others around the block. His best trick was probably divebombing a neighbor, snatching the unsuspecting victim's keys out of his hand. Another of his favorites is to get under somebody's pantcuff and pull down socks or untie shoes.

ROCKY ALSO likes to divebomb the ball during a neighborhood basketball or volleyball game and takes particular delight in the tail of the Moeller's pet dog, Bambi.

Rocky, who the Moellers found out recently should be called Roxanne, also likes a little bread — soaked in whiskey. Mark said he had to discontinue the practice after Rocky got drunk.

"He was flying around sideways and divebombing everything in sight," said Mark.

ROCKY ALSO has a one word vocabulary, of "who," taught to him by Mark. "He used to bark like a dog when he was a baby because he was around the dog so much," said Mark. "He doesn't do that anymore."

A family friend will take Rocky soon, setting him free near his home in Chicago. Although it usually only happens in the movies, Mark is hoping Rocky will follow in the footsteps of Lassie, overcoming tremendous obstacles to find his way home.

IF NOT, MARK will go back to walking to school alone and the motorists along the route won't be wondering what was in their morning coffee anymore.

McGrenera said William Liebow, Centex vice president, satisfied the commission's major objections to the plan.

THOSE WERE A lack of sufficient entrance and exit from the east and south borders of the property and lack of walking access to Link School.

Liebow's new plan showed roads at the development's southern and eastern borders. The builder used his land and obtained easements from bordering landowners for roadways.

The roads would provide exits from the development to Biesterfeld Road and access to Home Avenue at Elk Grove Village's western border.

Centex's plan also showed slight changes in the internal street layout. The builder eliminated long straight runs of streets.

The commission had objected to long lengths of straight street contending that this created a traffic hazard and encouraged speeding.

The builder also provided access to nearby Link School.

WHEN THE CHANGES first were requested by commission members Centex claimed the requests were impossible to satisfy.

Liebow maintained he could not build roads on other owners' properties when their land separated his development from nearby streets.

At the Thursday meeting he assured the commission he now had some of the sion's approval the next step calls for submitting a "preliminary" plan.

The preliminary plan may be changed several times before it is submitted in its final state, and does not have to contain engineering information.

If the developer goes this far with his proposal he brings in a "tentative" plan, one that is backed up with complete planning information and is exact as to every inch of planned land use.

Tentative plans call for a public hearing and at this point the builder may expect a plan commission recommendation to the village board.

necessary easements and was seriously negotiating for the rest.

If the Centex tentative plan meets with the plan commission's approval at the April 18th meeting, it could go to the village board for a vote April 23.

At its last appearance before the village board Centex was told by Village Pres. Charles Zettek, to satisfy the plan commission's complaints.

Books? Rotary has 'em...

More than 10,000 volumes of hardbound and paperback books will be offered for sale by Rotary Club members of Elk Grove Village April 13.

Rotarian James Stevenson is chairman in charge of the club's second annual book sale to provide funds for various Rotary Club charities.

Members have for the past several months been collecting book donations from area residents.

The volumes, varying from fiction to reference material will be put on sale at the Elk Grove High School from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. April 13.

Hardbound books will sell for 30 cents apiece or four for $1 and paperbacks will be offered for 15 cents apiece or two for a quarter.

Special editions will be priced individually.

Rotarians recruited their wives and families to help store and collect books and the helpers will continue the task the night before the sale when the collection of books is moved from various storage areas to Elk Grove High School and sorted for sale.

Teachers want to renegotiate

Because of the "skyrocketing" cost of living, the Schaumburg Education Assn. will ask the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education to renegotiate the teachers' current three-year contract to provide additional salary and fringe benefits this year.

SEA Pres Jay Hansen notified the school board Thursday that a letter concerning the request would be forwarded soon.

SEA has been discussing the request for some time. Hansen said after the meeting. After board members approved "family generous" salaries for the schools' administration Thursday, he said, it seemed appropriate to inform them that teachers would be seeking the same.

Teachers are in the first year of the three-year contract.

Expanded PE program OKd

An expanded physical education program for the junior high schools has been approved by the board of education.

Intramural programs next year will be offered two days a week for boys, two days a week for girls and one day scheduled for coeducational programs.

Interscholastic programs will include basketball and wrestling for boys and basketball, volleyball, cheerleading and pom pom girls for the girls. Track and cross country will be offered to both boys and girls in the spring.

The total cost for the programs is about $22,400. However, if the starting time of school is not changed from the current 8 a.m. to about 8:30 or 9 a.m., an additional $1,384 will be needed to conduct all activities after school.

Consultant post approved

A testing and research consultant has been approved by a narrow margin by the board of education. The consultant will be responsible for the district's total testing program and work with departments in planning, designing and implementing research designs.

The state will pay the consultant's salary the first year, 70 per cent of his salary the second year and 50 per cent the third year. Starting with the fourth year the district must pay for the consultant.

Jay Hansen, Schaumburg Education Association president, stated he was skeptical, and a large number of teachers were skeptical about this position. He said they feared the position would become self-perpetuating and it would become necessary to "find something" for the consultant to do. He also questioned the amount of classroom time which could be taken away and the fact that the district must pay additional amounts for the consultant each year.

Mrs. Bonnie Hannon, board member, said the consultant will help "streamline" the district's testing and help determine what tests are worth taking. This should prevent students from taking unnecessary tests, she said.

The proposal passed on a 4 to 3 vote. Sherwood Spatz, Mrs. Arlene Czajkowski and Mrs. Brenda Pulla voted against hiring the consultant.

Sponsors payment OKd

Payment for sponsors of after-school nonathletic programs at the junior high schools received approval by the board of education.

Sponsors for the student council, yearbook and school newspaper will receive $300 for a minimum of 80 hours. Sponsors for additional programs will receive $100 for a minimum of 24 hours.

Frost, Elsenhower and Kellers Junior high schools will be limited to six clubs and Addams Junior High School will be limited to nine clubs. This averages about one club for every 150 students.

SEAMSTRESSES ARE TRAINED as early as third grade at Dist. 59's Juliette Low School. The school is one of many in the district that offer optional classes to students in their special interest areas from time to time. Kristen Blegen tries for a straight seam while she tries her hand at the art of dressmaking.

A Des Plaines youth faces a marijuana possession charge after police said they found a cigaret rolled with the weed while they were questioning him.

Arrested Thursday was Randall Reece, 19, of 1110 Second Ave. According to reports, Reece was stopped by Des Plaines police in his auto near Webster Lane and Devon Avenue.

Police were looking for Reece for questioning in connection with a burglary and while searching him near his auto, the cigaret and a pipe were found.

Reece has been scheduled for a May 2 appearance in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Elk Grove Village man ticketed in accident

A 19-year-old Elk Grove Village youth was cited on two traffic counts Saturday morning when he apparently ran a stop sign on Hintz Road at Wolf Road and hit another car.

Paul Muhlenfeld, 300 Landmeier, was charged by Cook County Sheriff's Police with disobeying a stop sign and driving while under the influence. He and a passenger, Terry Kirkendall, 21, of 910 Ironwood, Mount Prospect, were treated and released at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. The driver of the second car, George Earthule, of 910 Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling, was not injured. The accident took place around 1:30 a.m.

Zoning scandal probes turn up suspected corruption

JAMES THOMPSON

by NANCY COWGER and BOB CASEY

The massive federal investigation of corruption in Chicago and 44 suburbs is beginning to have a "domino effect," with evidence of wrongdoing turned up in one case often leading probes on to several others.

Among cases that U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office hopes to use to uncover corruption in other areas are zoning scandals in Hoffman Estates and Wheeling, The Herald has learned.

Bernard Peskin, a key figure in the Hoffman Estates case convicted Thursday of bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy, may be required to provide information in other cases under a grant of immunity from further prosecution.

THE U.S. ATTORNEY'S office plans to seek an immunity grant for Peskin, an attorney specializing in zoning matters, and obtain his testimony about approval of developments by other suburbs and by Cook County, according to a source close to the case.

The Wheeling probe resulted Jan. 31 in the indictments of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and five others on extortion and conspiracy charges. It has "opened a door" on corruption in Cook County government, another federal source said.

The Herald has learned that zoning actions by Cook County have been under scrutiny by federal investigators for several months. Asst. U. S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, head of Thompson's Special Investigations Division, confirmed that the county probe is under way but declined to comment further.

Last week's guilty verdict for Peskin, former state representative who resigned as Northfield Township Democratic committeeman just before his indictment Oct. 26, keeps Thompson's conviction record at 100 per cent in the suburban probe.

OF THE 14 PERSONS and one developer indicted so far in the investigation of corruption in 44 suburbs, seven have pleaded guilty, one has pleaded no contest, one has been found guilty and charges are pending against seven others.

Peskin's conviction by a federal jury followed earlier guilty pleas by six former Hoffman Estates officials and a plea of no contest by Kaufman and Broad, Inc., which used Peskin to funnel payoffs to village officials in 1968.

One of the six Wheeling defendants, former village trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the extortion of furniture from Wickes, Inc., for favorable zoning. Five other defendants, including Stavros, have pleaded innocent.

Also indicted in the suburban probe was Curtis C. Whittaker, mayor of south suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1968 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Faubion, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U. S. Atty. Anton Valukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoffs to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park, (Continued on Page 2)

Merchants fear redevelopment may force moves

A proposed redevelopment plan for downtown Palatine met with charges of insensitivity to existing merchants and homeowners in the area at a public hearing on Saturday.

Strong opposition to the proposed plan, which calls for the elimination of on-street parking in the commercial area and the phasing out of some single-family homes, was voiced by more than 40 residents who attended the meeting.

Homeowners questioned what protection they would have against condemnation proceedings. A merchant whose business depends on on-street parking asked who would help him relocate. Residents asked who would pay for the public improvements necessary to construct the high intensity office buildings and high-density multiple-family buildings proposed for sections of the downtown.

BUT, THERE weren't any answers. Wilton Battles of Planning Horizons, Inc., the planning firm which prepared the proposed plan, emphasized that the plan was still in the conceptual stages and details had not been worked out.

Battles said the purpose of the public hearing was to get input from residents on what they would like to see developed in the central business district so this could possibly be incorporated in the plan.

Many residents opposed the elimination of on-street parking to create a pedestrian system and expressed fear that parking fees in the proposed multi-story parking structures would be prohibitive or not close enough to the commercial area for senior citizens. Parking structures are proposed for the southwest corner of Plum Grove Road and Wood Street, the southeast corner of Palatine Road and Brockway Street and an unspecified location in the area east of Smith Street and north of Palatine Road where high intensity office use is proposed.

Phil Stern, chairman of the Palatine Advisory Committee, said several residents had suggested to him the construction of a community center in the downtown area where senior citizen, day care and other activities could be coordinated.

RESIDENTS ALSO suggested that the present library site at 149 N. Brockway St. continue to be used as a branch library when the new library is constructed instead of the proposed multi-family use.

Asked about a timetable for the redevelopment, James Shaw, a village trustee and member of the New Palatine Committee which is responsible for the redevelopment plans, said construction could start within the next two years but total implementation of the plan was probably eight to ten years away.

The New Palatine Committee is meeting on Tuesday at 9 a.m. at the Palatine National Bank to discuss the proposed plan. Gene Kripak of Planning Horizons, Inc. said he would not recommend final adoption of the plan until more public hearings are scheduled. The meeting is open to the public.

240-unit complex on Hicks Road

Luxury apartment plans revealed

Plans for a 240-unit luxury apartment complex in northeast Palatine Township were unveiled Friday.

The proposed apartment complex, known as The Lagoons, would be located on a 9.75-acre parcel on the west side of Hicks Road north of Dundee Road.

James and Peter Bianco are proposing to develop the site as a planned unit development containing four mid-rise buildings, two 4-story and two 6-story buildings. The 240 units would include 60 one-bedroom units, 140 two-bedroom units and 40 three-bedroom units.

The proposed development calls for developing natural flood plains on the property into lagoons for the dual purpose of water retention and recreation. A club house with an outdoor swimming pool is also included in the plan. Parking would include 182 surface spaces and 184 underground spaces.

FOUR BUILDING and planning authorities testified before the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals Friday that the planned development constituted the "highest and best usage of the land" and would be an asset to the area.

Present zoning on the parcel is R-3, single-family residence, on one section and R-6, general residence, on another parcel. The developers are seeking to have the entire parcel zoned R-6 and then receive a special use for the development of a planned unit development.

If the zoning change is granted, Peter Bianco indicated construction would start immediately.

James Bennett, the Village of Palatine's representative at the public hearing, expressed concern about the strains it would put on the village's fire department which now serves the area.

Bennett revealed the village is negotiating to purchase nearly 40 per cent of the Ferndale Heights Utility Company including two wells, a storage tank and an emergency booster. Bennett contended if the purchase was made, the water capacity at The Lagoons, which would be served by Ferndale Heights Utility Co., could decrease making firefighting a problem in the area.

ALSO BEFORE THE zoning board on Friday was a request to rezone a 4.5-acre site on the northwest corner of Quentin Road and Wood Street from R-4, single family, to M-1, manufacturing. Charles Waterworth is seeking the zoning change to permit the construction of a contractor's office, shop and yard for Two-W's Black Top Inc. of Palatine.

The proposal met with strong opposition from homeowners in the area who contended it represented spot zoning in a residential area, would not be an asset to the semi-rural area and would lower their property values.

A third zoning change request also drew negative response from homeowners in the area. Gus Lykos is petitioning the board to change the zoning on a 4.3-acre site on the north side of Palatine Road west of Ela Road from R-2, single-family, to B-4, general service, to permit the construction of a catering establishment with a dining room and bar.

Palatine has requested 21 days to file a statutory objection to all three zoning changes. Inverness asked for 21 days to file objections to the Lykos and Waterworth petitions and Hoffman Estates asked for 21 days to object to the Lykos petition.

If statutory objections are filed against any of the projects, approval of the requested zoning change would require a three-quarters vote of the zoning board. A decision on the zoning requests will be made by the board at a later date.

'Do you take this bus to be your energy-saving device?'

by BETTY LEE

The wedding of Karen Guenther and William Beltz last weekend was an energy-saving event.

Her father, Theodore Guenther, 615 S. Kenicott, Arlington Heights, ordered a bus Saturday to take Chicago-area guests to the wedding at Hubertus, Wis., a small town 20 miles northwest of Milwaukee.

The bus was an answer to one of Karen's pre-wedding woes: Would people come to a distant ceremony if they're not sure of getting enough gas to make the trip? She also was concerned about the energy shortage.

Guenther reassured her of her wedding plans and when a friend volunteered a bus, the problem was as good as solved.

Early Saturday morning about a dozen couples gathered at Our Lady of the Wayside School near Ridge and Park in Arlington Heights and boarded the bus.

A friend of the Guenthers', Geri Schoepke, handed out doughnuts and playing cards to make the 105-mile trip a pleasant one.

KAREN, 25, who grew up in Arlington Heights and attended Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows, met her husband when they both were attending college in Milwaukee. She is currently an art teacher in Fox Point and he is studying for a master's degree at Cardinal College in Milwaukee.

She insisted that the wedding be held at the Holy Hill Shrine in Hubertus for a romantic reason... she and her husband went there often while in college.

Guests from Ottawa, Ill., and from San Diego, Calif. boarded on the bus to the wedding.

"It's so romantic," said Jim Gavin, one of the guests.

Bus company gains state subsidy

by KURT BAER

A $17,000 Illinois state subsidy has been approved for Metron Systems Corp., operator of the seven-month-old commuter bus service in Arlington Heights.

The first installment of the operating subsidy should be paid to the company within a month, according to John Cook, an Illinois Department of Transportation official.

Metron must use $5,000 of the grant to repay the Village of Arlington Heights for a short-term subsidy it approved after company president Claude Luisada announced the Arlington Heights transit operations were on the verge of bankruptcy last month.

But the balance of the money will be enough to keep Metron operating for two to three more months, Luisada said Friday.

COOK SAID THE $17,000 subsidy was approved as part of an interim program intended to aid suburban bus companies until the Regional Transportation Authority goes into operation.

Luisada said he still does not know how, if at all, the RTA will help Metron. "I don't think anyone will know that until the RTA board (of directors) is appointed," he said.

Metron had hoped to receive its first subsidy check from the state back on Feb. 23. But delays in determining the company's eligibility held up authorization of the grant, Cook said.

As a result, Metron has missed the first of three installments. However, the money that would have been sent in the first payment will be included with the second, Cook said.

The amount of the subsidy is based on 1973 operating deficits, Cook said.

"Metron may be at a disadvantage in that regard since it only had three months of operation in 1973," he said.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Village Board voted March 25 to approve a one-time, $6,000 subsidy to pay back bills and keep the Arlington Heights bus operation running through April.

The company currently operates three commuter bus lines in the village, offering rush-hour bus service to and from the Arlington Heights train station. About 250 people use the service daily.

Ridership has been steadily increasing, and Luisada has predicted that the operation could be at a break even point financially by September.

The money problem has held up the start of dial-a-bus service in Arlington Heights. The door-to-door service would operate like a taxi company during the non-rush hours.

Minorities being sought for training program

The Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows has begun recruiting unskilled minority workers to participate in a 32-week training program with the Village of Arlington Heights.

Bruce Newton, Northwest Opportunity Center Director, said Friday he has received three complete applications for the work study program which is intended to teach unemployed persons some basic skills needed to get a job.

Eventually, the village hopes some 25 people will enroll in the program, most of them Spanish-speaking persons living in the Northwest part of Cook County.

PARTICIPANTS WILL work two days a week at maintenance or clerical jobs with the village and attend two days of classes at Harper College. They will be paid $2.10 an hour for time spent in the program.

The low wage is making it difficult to enroll people in the job skill program, which is being funded through Cook County.

"The program is especially appealing to persons on public aid, if they can arrange for child care," Newton said. "We don't see much chance of attracting someone who's already working."

Newton said the job training program was "long overdue for this part of Cook County" and he said that he was "fairly optimistic" enough people will be enrolled to make the program work.

CONTACTS ARE BEING made with some industries in the area to try to find jobs for the trainees after the 32 week program ends, Newton says.

Information about the program has been distributed to Head Start centers and public aid counselors, he said.

While no work experience is required to qualify for the job training, an understanding of basic spoken English is necessary.

Additional information is available from the personnel office at the Arlington Heights Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Racing board endorses open tracks on Sunday

The Illinois Racing Board has put its weight behind Sunday horse racing.

In recommended legislation which will be submitted to the General Assembly, the seven-member board backed recent suggestions that horse racing in Illinois be conducted year round, including Sundays.

It also proposed eliminating the 40-cent admission tax as an incentive for greater attendance at Illinois tracks, reducing the size of the racing board from seven to five members and paying board members $150 a day, to a maximum of $4,800 annually.

RACING BOARD members, appointed by the governor, now serve without pay.

Other recommendations include equalizing the betting tax on harness and thoroughbred races. Harness wagering is currently taxed at a lower rate. The board also wants to impose stiffer penalties for persons convicted of fixing races or drugging horses.

Dropping the 40 cent admission tax would cost the state about $2.3 million in yearly revenue. However, the board said it believes reducing the admission price would encourage greater attendance.

Money lost could be made up through additional racing dates and other changes in the racing tax laws.

Several weeks ago, the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission, also recommended year round horse racing, including Sundays.

JACK LOOME, the president of Arlington Park, has said he is not certain whether Sunday racing would prove profitable in Illinois. Demands for overtime or special Sunday wages could wipe out any additional income, he believes.

Arlington Heights Pres. Jack Walsh is not opposed to Sunday racing, however, he has said he would want to know the hours and conditions under which such racing might be held at Arlington Park.

Loome also supports recommended changes that would allocate racing dates on a three-year rather than a one-year basis. The yearly uncertainty over when each race track will be open hampers planning and makes it difficult to draw top horsemen to the state, he said.

A proposal to change the law and permit year round racing was defeated in the legislature last year.

'Project 1980'

held for students

About 850 Palatine Hills Junior High School students participated in "Project 1980," a career day held at the school recently.

The purpose of the program was to inform students about different careers so that by 1980, when most of them join the working force, they will be able to make a well informed career choice, according to Becky Hodgins, publicity director for the school.

Each student chose four half-hour presentations from a list of 39. Careers presented included dental assistants, bricklayer, F.B.I. agent, truck driver, school teacher, caterer, writer, mechanic, commercial artist, pilot and model.

Zoning scandal probes turn up suspected corruption

JAMES THOMPSON

and BOB CASEY

The massive federal investigation of corruption in Chicago and 44 suburbs is beginning to have a "domino effect," with evidence of wrongdoing turned up in one case often leading probes on to several others.

Among cases that U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office hopes to use to uncover corruption in other areas are zoning scandals in Hoffman Estates and Wheeling. The Herald has learned.

Bernard Peskin, a key figure in the Hoffman Estates case convicted Thursday of bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy, may be required to provide information in other cases under a grant of immunity from further prosecution.

THE U.S. ATTORNEY'S office plans to seek an immunity grant for Peskin, an attorney specializing in zoning matters, and obtain his testimony about approval of developments by other suburbs and by Cook County, according to a source close to the case.

The Wheeling probe resulted Jan. 31 in the indictments of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and five others on extortion and conspiracy charges. It has "opened a door" on corruption in Cook County government, another federal source said.

The Herald has learned that zoning actions by Cook County have been under scrutiny by federal investigators for several months. Asst. U. S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, head of Thompson's Special Investigations Division, confirmed that the county probe is under way but declined to comment further.

Last week's guilty verdict for Peskin, former state representative who resigned as Northfield Township Democratic committeeman just before his indictment Oct. 26, keeps Thompson's conviction record at 100 per cent in the suburban probe.

OF THE 14 PERSONS and one developer indicted so far in the investigation of corruption in 44 suburbs, seven have pleaded guilty, one has pleaded no contest, one has been found guilty and charges are pending against seven others.

Peskin's conviction by a federal jury followed earlier guilty pleas by six former Hoffman Estates officials and a plea of no contest by Kaufman and Broad, Inc., which used Peskin to funnel payoffs to village officials in 1968.

One of the six Wheeling defendants, former village trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the extortion of furniture from Wickes, Inc., for favorable zoning. Five other defendants, including Stavros, have pleaded innocent.

Also indicted in the suburban probe was Curtis C. Whittaker, mayor of south suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1968 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Faubion, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U. S. Atty. Anton Valukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoffs to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park, (Continued on Page 2)

Librarian urges branches in two shopping centers

Rolling Meadows Librarian Virginia Connell has suggested establishing storefront library branches in the Plum Grove and Southland shopping centers.

She said these would be more practical than the estimated $250,000 addition being planned for the library building in the coming year. She added that she thought the two branches would not cost much more, but has no exact figures.

Besides making library facilities more convenient to residents on the fringes of the city, it would also make it safer for youngsters to visit a Rolling Meadows library facility, she said. Both would contribute to increased circulation.

MISS CONNELL said that youngsters in the Plum Grove area have to cross Ill. Rte. 53 in order to get to the present library at 3110 Martin Lanes. "This (Rte. 53) is a dangerous traffic hazard," she added. A similar problem faces youngsters in the southern part of the city.

Board Pres. Rodney Dahlin said the board would take the suggestion under consideration. He added that board members recognized the problem and had been considering a bookmobile to serve those areas.

"Rolling Meadows will triple its circulation in a year, with the two branches," Miss Connell said. Present circulation is far under standards suggested by the American Library Assn., she added. The association says about one third of each library's collection should be circulating at any one time. This would mean about 13,000 books from the Rolling Meadows Library should be circulating at one time, or about 26,000 should be taken out in an average month.

Total circulation for the month of March was 8,643 books.

THE MAJOR REASON for the low circulation, says Miss Connell, is the location of the library. Set at the end of a small residential street, there is little traffic in the area. Though signs are posted pointing to the library, Miss Connell said her staff receives five or six phone calls a day from people asking directions to the building.

"A library is no good without traffic," she said. Besides making it more convenient for people in different parts of the city to visit library facilities, branch offices would also put offshoots of the library into the path of traffic.

Adults, while shopping, could drop into the branch offices without going out of their way, and mothers could drop their children off in the library while they do their shopping. A small panel truck could take books from the main library to the branches daily, as books are requested by patrons, Miss Connell said.

The present library site is no one's fault, Miss Connell added. The library was working under two handicaps at the time the building was planned. The first was the lack of an adequate site in the center of the city. The only available land was the existing plot at 3110 Martin Ln.

THE SECOND HANDICAP was a 1965 projection which said the city would never expand past the tollway on the south. The projection also said that Rolling Meadows would remain primarily a bedroom — or single-family dwelling — area without any high-rises or apartments.

"Now you can see condominiums and high-rises in any direction," Miss Connell said.

She added that building will probably continue in the southern parts of the city. The estimated population of the city has already increased over the original projections of 20,000 for 1980. The 1965 projections also indicated that the population would even out at 25,000 about the year 2000.

The city has also expanded past the originally projected boundaries. Petitions for annexations from other residents even farther south and west are in the files, according to Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer.

Each of the two storefront branch offices would have basic reference materials such as dictionaries and encyclopedias. A base collection of around 10,000 books would be placed in each branch and changed continuously through the use of a small panel van. The van could also be used as a bookmobile on week-ends, Miss Connell suggested.

A HARD PUNCH will send the ball flying over the net, in hopes of scoring another point. A lot of hard work and stamina was required in a women's volleyball tournament held at Buehler YMCA in Palatine. Teams were formed and played against each other in rounds to capture the winning title.

Available land near highways is the target

Office complexes zeroing in on city

by TONI GINETTI

The availability of land on major highways in Rolling Meadows has made the city a target for a number of major and minor office developments.

Construction is under way on three major office complexes in the city, the Kenroy Crossroads of Commerce development on Algonquin Road and Ill. Rte. 53, the Gould Center on Golf Road and the Northwest Tollway and the Python office complex on Algonquin Road just east of Ill. Rte. 53.

Approval was given last year for a small office development on Plum Grove Road near Emerson Street, and a second proposal from Babbins and Associates, Inc. for a four-building complex on Golf Road just west of Algonquin Road was presented to city officials last week.

THE PYTHON COMPLEX recently began construction on the second of three office buildings on their site. Construction of the first building was completed last year and half of its 50,000 square feet already has been rented.

The Gould Center, which will become the worldwide headquarters of Gould Inc., an electronics manufacturer, will begin construction on its second phase this month, to include a ten-story office tower, sports complex and an original Picasso statue.

According to Jack Jackson, vice president of Gould, the environment of the development will be a main ingredient in attracting renters. The majority of the complex will be occupied by the Gould company but the amenities of the development should keep the center in a competitive bracket with other office centers in the area, he said.

"WE SAW IT as a unique area," he said of the Gould Center site. The site is protected and visible from both the tollway and Golf Road, he said. In addition, the forest preserve area directly south of the development was "instrumental in influencing" the company's decision to purchase the site.

Sheldon Goodman of Babbins, which is seeking to build a four-building office complex near Golf and Algonquin roads, said exposure of a development on major highways is an important factor in selecting sites.

He said, too, the development will be competitive in the market because it will aim at a different market than the large (Continued on Page 5)

Bus company gains state subsidy

by KURT BAER

A $17,000 Illinois state subsidy has been approved for Metron Systems Corp., operator of the seven-month-old commuter bus service in Arlington Heights.

The first installment of the operating subsidy should be paid to the company within a month, according to John Cook, an Illinois Department of Transportation official.

Metron must use $6,000 of the grant to repay the Village of Arlington Heights for a short-term subsidy it approved after company president Claude Luisada announced the Arlington Heights transit operations were on the verge of bankruptcy last month.

But the balance of the money will be enough to keep Metron operating for two to three more months, Luisada said Friday.

COOK SAID THE $17,000 subsidy was approved as part of an interim program intended to aid suburban bus companies until the Regional Transportation Authority goes into operation.

Luisada said he still does not know how, if at all, the RTA will help Metron. "I don't think anyone will know that until the RTA board (of directors) is appointed," he said.

Metron had hoped to receive its first subsidy check from the state back on Feb. 25. But delays in determining the company's eligibility held up authorization of the grant, Cook said.

As a result, Metron has missed the first of three installments. However, the money that would have been sent in the first payment will be included with the second, Cook said.

The amount of the subsidy is based on 1973 operating deficits, Cook said.

"Metron may be at a disadvantage in that regard since it only had three months of operation in 1973," he said.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Village Board voted March 25 to approve a one-time, $6,000 subsidy to pay back bills and keep the Arlington Heights bus operation running through April.

The company currently operates three commuter bus lines in the village, offering rush-hour bus service to and from the Arlington Heights train station. About 250 people use the service daily.

Ridership has been steadily increasing, and Luisada has predicted that the operation could be at a break even point financially by September.

The money problem has held up the start of dial-a-bus service in Arlington Heights. The door-to-door service would operate like a taxi company during the non-rush hours.

Minorities being sought for training program

The Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows has begun recruiting unskilled minority workers to participate in a 32-week training program with the Village of Arlington Heights.

Bruce Newton, Northwest Opportunity Center Director, said Friday he has received three complete applications for the work study program which is intended to teach unemployed persons some basic skills needed to get a job.

Eventually, the village hopes some 25 people will enroll in the program, most of them Spanish-speaking persons living in the Northwest part of Cook County.

PARTICIPANTS WILL work two days a week at maintenance or clerical jobs with the village and attend two days of classes at Harper College. They will be paid $2.10 an hour for time spent in the program.

complexes such as Gould and the Kenroy center.

He also cited the Woodfield Shopping Center and the development that has occurred around it as another factor which makes the area attractive to developers.

"I think the great impetus has been the Woodfield Mall," Goodman said. "This whole area is turning into another downtown Chicago."

THE NUMBER of office developments, however, may have a detrimental effect on the success of all of them, Jackson said. "I view it (the development) with some degree of consternation," he said. "My personal feeling is that it occurred as a filling of a void." He said years of lack of office development have led to a sudden boom in construction to the point of possible "overbuilding."

"Of course we hope to be the most prestigious site," he said.

The Gould Center as well as the Kenroy project will likely attract a different rent market than the smaller Babbitt development, Goodman said. He said the firm feels competition will not be so great among the varying projects as to hinder the success of any.

Zoning scandal probes turn up suspected corruption

JAMES THOMPSON

by NANCY COWGER and BOB CASEY

The massive federal investigation of corruption in Chicago and 44 suburbs is beginning to have a "domino effect," with evidence of wrongdoing turned up in one case often leading probers on to several others.

Among cases that U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office hopes to use to uncover corruption in other areas are zoning scandals in Hoffman Estates and Wheeling, The Herald has learned.

Bernard Peskin, a key figure in the Hoffman Estates case convicted Thursday of bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy, may be required to provide information in other cases under a grant of immunity from further prosecution.

THE U.S. ATTORNEY'S office plans to seek an immunity grant for Peskin, an attorney specializing in zoning matters, and obtain his testimony about approval of developments by other suburbs and by Cook County, according to a source close to the case.

The Wheeling probe resulted Jan. 31 in the indictments of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and five others on extortion and conspiracy charges. It has "opened a door" on corruption in Cook County government, another federal source said.

The Herald has learned that zoning actions by Cook County have been under scrutiny by federal investigators for several months. Asst. U. S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, head of Thompson's Special Investigations Division, confirmed that the county probe is under way but declined to comment further.

Last week's guilty verdict for Peskin, former state representative who resigned as Northfield Township Democratic committeeman just before his indictment Oct. 26, keeps Thompson's conviction record at 100 per cent in the suburban probe.

OF THE 14 PERSONS and one developer indicted so far in the investigation of corruption in 44 suburbs, seven have pleaded guilty, one has pleaded no contest, one has been found guilty and charges are pending against seven others.

Peskin's conviction by a federal jury followed earlier guilty pleas by six former Hoffman Estates officials and a plea of no contest by Kaufman and Broad, Inc., which used Peskin to funnel payoffs to village officials in 1968.

One of the six Wheeling defendants, former village trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the extortion of furniture from Wickes, Inc., for favorable zoning. Five other defendants, including Stavros, have pleaded innocent.

Also indicted in the suburban probe was Curtis C. Whittaker, mayor of south suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1968 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Faubion, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U. S. Atty. Anton Valukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoffs to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park, (Continued on Page 2)

Schaumburg offenses jump 75%

Crime increase blamed on more people, businesses

by STIRLING MORITA

Crime in Schaumburg jumped by about 75 per cent in 1973 as compared to 1972, police statistics show.

Total offenses rose from 1,713 in 1972 to 3,003 in 1973. Most of the offense increase occurred in vandalism and incidents involving commercial establishments.

Police Chief Martin Conroy noted that the increase in serious crimes, about 50 per cent, was less than the rise in lesser crimes, about 110 per cent.

The chief attributed the increase in store-related crimes to a jump in village population and the opening of more business establishments in the village.

STORE-RELATED incidents like auto burglaries, theft and deceptive practice all recorded substantial gains. Theft increased from 501 to 812, auto burglaries from 176 to 249 and deceptive practice from 131 to 291.

Conroy noted that the crime increase at Woodfield Shopping Center was about 25 per cent. He added that Schaumburg could not be compared to quieter suburbs like Roselle because the presence in Schaumburg of many shopping centers and the gigantic Woodfield is a drawing card for criminal types.

Vandalism such as that in neighboring Hoffman Estates has skyrocketed. The number of incidents shot up from 270 to 624. Conroy said in addition to the natural increase with population growth, there might be more persons reporting minor vandalism incidents like tire tracks on the edge of a lawn.

The number of juveniles processed through the police department jumped about 93 per cent. While the number of juveniles involved in serious crimes dropped from 186 to 181, those detained for lesser crimes jumped from 114 to 332.

CONROY SAID youth officer Terry McGraw has been instrumental in maintaining better records for juvenile-related crimes. This might have resulted in the increase, the chief said.

The total manhours of the department spent in service increased from 71,347 in 1972 to 83,132 in 1973.

Conroy said he is planning to have a patrolman assigned to the detective bureau for about six months so that the men on the street could learn what is involved in detective work. The training would be essential because the patrolman is usually the first law enforcement officer on the scene of a crime, and it is necessary for the patrolman to notice or preserve evidence that might disappear or be spoiled by the time detectives arrive on the scene, Conroy added.

Schaumburg streakers 'Inherit the Wind'

Three Schaumburg youths may have caught a chill as they streaked through a performance of "Inherit the Wind" at 9:30 p.m. Saturday in the Conant High School Cafeteria.

Two of the juveniles were apprehended and turned over to Hoffman Estates police, who released them to custody of their parents.

While police didn't say so, perhaps the youths were hoping to add a little realism to the play based on the Scopes "Monkey" trial contesting the right of public school instructors to teach the theory of man's evolution from primates.

Hoffman Estates crime up 14%

Criminal offenses in Hoffman Estates rose about 14 per cent during 1973, the annual police department's report shows.

The number of incidents increased from 3,141 in 1972 to 3,601 in 1973. However, a different kind of reporting and classification system was used for two categories in the 1973 statistics.

The increase in crime closely parallels yearly crime growth in the past for Hoffman Estates.

Police Chief John O'Connell said, "In the year 1973, the activity of this police department has increased in proximity to the increased population with parallel increases in offenses and incidents requiring police action or investigation."

STATISTICS REVEALED a notable upsurge in vandalism. In 1972 there were 354 incidents while in 1973 there were 484. Other increases were registered in minor miscellaneous incidents.

Lt. William Freund said the vandalism count has been increasing every year and attributed the increase to the growth in population — the more people there are, the more chance of some incidents occurring.

In connection with vandalism control, the Hoffman Estates Civil Defense Department spent 450 manhours since July in patrolling the schools to prevent property damage.

The civil defense men, who are also auxiliary policemen, spent about 2,108 hours in 1973 conducting church traffic, assisting in traffic control for accidents, fires and general assistance to the police department. In 1972, the department spent 1,713 hours working for the village.

All services rendered by the Hoffman Estates police jumped about 26 per cent from $5,414 in 1972 to $6,963 in 1973.

In September, the department started a new service officer program in which police cadets handled non-criminal incidents to take the load off the patrolmen.

SERVICE OFFICERS handled 60 various complaints and 27 reports, assisted 143 citizens, checked 61 business licenses and issued 55 parking citations, 66 parking warnings, 76 vehicle sticker citations, eight vehicle sticker warnings, five citations for dog at large, two abandoned auto citations and 17 ordinance warnings.

The department has received flak from village trustees about "nonenforcement" of village ordinances.

O'Connell said he fell short of one of his goals — which was to have one sworn policeman for every 750 persons in the village.

"Equipment in most areas has been improved, however, due to the lack of modern filing and recording systems, the areas pertaining to clerical and records remain unchanged, thus requiring many hours of tedious manual labor," O'Connell said.

Two-village transit study on Hoffman board agenda

Cooperation with Schaumburg in a proposed $7,500 mass transportation needs study will be discussed at tonight's Hoffman Estates Village Board meeting.

A survey to identify transportation needs and design a total system of services, routes, modes and schedules for both communities has been proposed by Claude Luisada, president of Metron Systems Corp., 1100 W. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect.

The proposal was in a reply to inquiries from Schaumburg's mass transportation committee. The examination would take about eight weeks, according to Luisada.

But Luisada recently told Schaumburg officials that looking at mass transportation needs of that community without taking Hoffman Estates into consideration is "like trying to take care of one Siamese twin and not the other."

MAYOR VIRGINIA Hayter said Friday that the idea had been proposed to her last week by Mayor Robert O. Atcher.

"Mayor Atcher and I discussed the idea very thoroughly and it will be brought to the village board this week," she said.

However, she indicated that the proposal will probably be assigned to a board committee-of-the-whole for further study.

Luisada said his survey would identify the need to provide or expand railroad commuter service, intra-village service to and from principal employers, shopping areas, Harper College and perhaps Northwestern Community and Alexian Brothers hospitals.

LUISADA RECENTLY received a $5,000 subsidy from the Village of Arlington Heights where he has been operating three commuter bus lines since September because his company was facing financial failure. He was also granted a $17,000 subsidy by the state last week aimed at tidying over his Arlington Heights operation until RTA funds became available.

He has also approached Rolling Meadows and Mount Prospect with similar proposals to initiate service but has made it clear that he is now operating only in Arlington Heights and East Chicago, Ind.

Following village board recommendations, the Schaumburg transportation committee this week expanded its search for transportation proposals.

The committee has asked Real Estate Research Corp., Northwestern University and Harper College, for recommendations, said Fred Detrich, chairman.

Rev. Wincek looks back with feeling

by JUDY JOBBITT

The Rev. Leo Wincek has witnessed a population explosion in Hoffman Estates during the past 14 years as pastor of St. Hubert's Roman Catholic Church.

But he has witnessed more than that during his 40 years in the priesthood.

Rev. Wincek, who first served the inner city during the Depression, said there is always something new to challenge him.

"People born in the last 25 years don't believe what we had to do in the Depression," he said. Not too many people owned cars, he said, so the church became the center of social life. Church attendance was strong then, he said, and everyone lived within walking distance of the church.

"Here, it's a matter of miles," he said.

THE FIRST 25 years of his priesthood were the easiest, Rev. Wincek said. "There wasn't all of this confusion and protest that we've witnessed in the last 10 years. There wasn't any divorce to the extent there is now."

The biggest problem in his parish, he said, is reaching the youth. Currently the parish has an athletic program to draw the youth into the parish. However, he said it has had "limited" success.

Part of the problem today, he said, is the transient society. "There was stability years ago. People bought homes and stayed in an area. There wasn't the mobility or the permissiveness you find today."

"And now we have the drug problem that wasn't even thought of then," he said.

BECAUSE PEOPLE "lost less to sink roots," the church has tend more of its fusion, he said. And it makes it more difficult to bring people into the church.

When Rev. Wincek first came to St. Hubert's, it was a mission parish. But the potential growth was well known at that time, he said.

A parish of 500 is "ideal," he said. Then the priest can know his parishioners well, he said. St. Hubert's now serves about 2,000 families.

His first challenge when he arrived at St. Hubert's was getting a school operating. He celebrated his first mass at St. Hubert's on June 19, 1960, and by March, 1961, the parish broke ground for the school. Nine months later the school was operating.

AT ONE POINT, he said, they were handling 900 in the parochial school and 2,000 in religious instruction after school. After St. Marcelline cut out from St. Hubert's in 1965, these numbers declined. But they are increasing again.

Rev. Wincek was ordained to the priesthood in 1934. He attended St. Mary of the Lake Seminary, Mundelein, and Quigley Preparatory School, Chicago.

A native of Chicago, his first parish assignment was at St. Florian Church in Chicago. He served in five parishes on the South Side before coming to St. Hubert's in 1960.

"This was a challenge when I came out here," he said. "As I look back now, despite all that it required, it has been rewarding and very fulfilling."

Use of library OK'd

Three theatrical groups were granted permission to use library facilities by the Schaumburg Township Library Board.

The Friends of the Library Players, Schaumburg Festival Theater and The Players compliment the needs of the library programs, said Michael Madden, library director. Because they add to the library programs, the groups will not be charged for use of the facilities.

Dist. 54 wrapup

Teachers want to renegotiate

Because of the "skyrocketing" cost of living, the Schaumburg Education Assn. will ask the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education to renegotiate the teachers' current three-year contract to provide additional salary and fringe benefits this year.

SEA Pres Jay Hansen notified the school board Thursday that a letter concerning the request would be forwarded soon.

SEA has been discussing the request for some time, Hansen said after the meeting. After board members approved "family generous" salaries for the schools' administration Thursday, he said, it seemed appropriate to inform them that teachers would be seeking the same.

Teachers are in the first year of the three-year contract.

Expanded PE program OK'd

An expanded physical education program for the junior high schools has been approved by the board of education.

Intramural programs next year will be offered two days a week for boys, two days a week for girls and one day scheduled for coeducational programs.

Interscholastic programs will include basketball and wrestling for boys and basketball, volleyball, cheerleading and pom pom girls for the girls. Track and cross country will be offered to both boys and girls in the spring.

The total cost for the programs is about $22,400. However, if the starting time of school is not changed from the current 8 a.m. to about 8:30 or 9 a.m., an additional $1,584 will be needed to conduct all activities after school.

Consultant post approved

A testing and research consultant has been approved by a narrow margin by the board of education. The consultant will be responsible for the district's total testing program and work with departments in planning, designing and implementing research designs.

The state will pay the consultant's salary the first year, 70 per cent of his salary the second year and 50 per cent the third year. Starting with the fourth year the district must pay for the consultant.

Jay Hansen, Schaumburg Education Association president, stated he was skeptical, and a large number of teachers were skeptical about this position. He said they feared the position would become self-perpetuating and it would become necessary to "find something" for the consultant to do. He also questioned the amount of classroom time which could be taken away and the fact that the district must pay additional amounts for the consultant each year.

Mrs. Bonnie Hannon, board member, said the consultant will help "streamline" the district's testing and help determine what tests are worth taking. This should prevent students from taking unnecessary tests, she said.

The proposal passed on a 4 to 3 vote. Sherwood Spatz, Mrs. Arlene Czajkowski and Mrs. Brenda Pulla voted against hiring the consultant.

Accident victim listed 'serious'

Charles J. Donahue, 22, of 1070 Knollwood Dr., Schaumburg, was seriously injured at about 7:30 a.m. Sunday after he fell asleep while driving southbound on I-90.

Police said Donahue's auto struck guardrail along the expressway and became airborne. After the car nicked a light post and knocked over a chain link fence, it fell to Woodfield Road where it struck a second guardrail and nosed over, said police. Donahue was pinned in the wreckage, but was freed by Schaumburg Fire Department personnel.

State Trooper Michael Summerville said Donahue told him he had fallen asleep just north of Woodfield Road. Donahue was admitted to the intensive care section at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Police nab embezzlement suspect here

Schaumburg police nabbed an embezzlement suspect when they stopped a driver Friday afternoon for failure to display license plates on his car.

Warrants were outstanding against the driver, Michael A. Long, 26, of 700 Adams, Hoffman Estates, for embezzlement, from Arlington, Va., police, and for desertion from the Quantico, Va., U.S. Marine Base. Schaumburg police charged Long with failure to display license plates and driving without a valid driver's license. Long was turned over to the provost marshal of the Marine Corps Detachment at Great Lakes Naval Air Station.

Patrolman Paul Schnetz made the arrest after he stopped Long's auto at Meacham Road and Woodfield Drive.

Schaumburg police also were investigating over the weekend the reported theft of drugs from the parked auto of a medical doctor at Walden's Prairie Square Apartments.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Anderson of Ann Arbor, Mich., were unloading their auto after arriving to visit a friend in the apartment complex at 12:30 a.m. Saturday. Dr. Anderson told police a suitcase containing about $200 worth of codeine and other drugs, jewelry, clothes and cosmetics was taken while he and his wife were momentarily away from the car.

In a weekend burglary William Douros of 817 Stanford Ln., Schaumburg, reported about $500 in a tool chest and its contents stolen from his home between 7 and 9 p.m. Friday.

Zoning scandal probes turn up suspected corruption

JAMES THOMPSON

and BOB CASEY

The massive federal investigation of corruption in Chicago and 44 suburbs is beginning to have a "domino effect," with evidence of wrongdoing turned up in one case often leading probes on to several others.

Among cases that U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office hopes to use to uncover corruption in other areas are zoning scandals in Hoffman Estates and Wheeling. The Herald has learned.

Bernard Peskin, a key figure in the Hoffman Estates case convicted Thursday of bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy, may be required to provide information in other cases under a grant of immunity from further prosecution.

THE U.S. ATTORNEY'S office plans to seek an immunity grant for Peskin, an attorney specializing in zoning matters, and obtain his testimony about approval of developments by other suburbs and by Cook County, according to a source close to the case.

The Wheeling probe resulted Jan. 31 in the indictments of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and five others on extortion and conspiracy charges. It has "opened a door" on corruption in Cook County government, another federal source said.

The Herald has learned that zoning actions by Cook County have been under scrutiny by federal investigators for several months. Asst. U. S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, head of Thompson's Special Investigations Division, confirmed that the county probe is under way but declined to comment further.

Last week's guilty verdict for Peskin, former state representative who resigned as Northfield Township Democratic committeeman just before his indictment Oct. 26, keeps Thompson's conviction record at 100 per cent in the suburban probe.

OF THE 14 PERSONS and one developer indicted so far in the investigation of corruption in 44 suburbs, seven have pleaded guilty, one has pleaded no contest, one has been found guilty and charges are pending against seven others.

Peskin's conviction by a federal jury followed earlier guilty pleas by six former Hoffman Estates officials and a plea of no contest by Kaufman and Broad, Inc., which used Peskin to funnel payoffs to village officials in 1968.

One of the six Wheeling defendants, former village trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the extortion of furniture from Wickes, Inc., for favorable zoning. Five other defendants, including Stavros, have pleaded innocent.

Also indicted in the suburban probe was Curtis C. Whittaker, mayor of south suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1968 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Faubion, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U. S. Atty. Anton Valukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoffs to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park, (Continued on Page 2)

New commuter station complex being planned

Plans reportedly are afoot to build a new commuter depot, along with parking spaces and offices, on the air rights above the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks in downtown Mount Prospect. The Herald has learned.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert Friday confirmed reports that preliminary discussion has taken place between top village officials and a prominent Chicago real estate developer interested in constructing the facility near the site of the present railroad depot.

"Yes, there's something to it," he said. The concept of the arrangement, Teichert said, "fits very well with the rehabilitation of downtown. My feeling is that it's a very worthwhile pursuit."

NO TIMETABLE for developing the project has been discussed, nor the height of the structure, but Teichert mentioned six stories as "a feasible approach. I don't mean I'm ruling out seven or eight — it depends on what we're talking about." The six-story precedent for buildings in downtown Mount Prospect was set with last week's village board approval of a new Mount Prospect State Bank building.

Teichert emphasized that discussions so far have been limited to "feeling out the village" toward the concept of a new building that would house a depot, two floors of parking space and additional floors of office space, but said discussions have not progressed to specific plans.

"It's been a sounding-out thing so they (the developers) can see if there is something that is workable in the community or whether it is fruitless to pursue. I told them I don't think it's fruitless at all. It's a worthwhile thing to look at. It's certainly intriguing to me when private enterprise comes looking."

THE DEVELOPER has not been identified, but both Teichert and Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley indicated it is a prominent Chicago real estate developer. "It was big names, not just someone scheming," the mayor said.

Eppley said the new building could "give downtown a shot in the arm." The village has started preliminary plans for revitalizing the central business district, but private developers appear to be a step ahead of the village.

The Mount Prospect State Bank has announced plans to build a six-story facility east of its present bank, and a father-son restaurant team has proposed remodeling the abandoned A&P grocery store into a banquet hall.

Teichert 'not sure' he can support new boundary accord

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert said he was "a little disappointed, to say the least" at a last-minute change by Des Plaines in an agreement drawn up by the two towns to resolve their boundary squabbles.

Teichert said last Friday he was "not sure" he could support the amended version passed by Des Plaines last Thursday night. The new plan differed from the plan that was informally agreed upon by both municipalities and later officially adopted by Mount Prospect in that it calls for deletion of any reference of the boundary line that had been extended along Oakton Street west of Elmhurst Road. The new plan also adds a provision stating that either community could annex property either north or south of Oakton, west of Oakton and Elmhurst.

The original plan set Elmhurst Road as the east-west dividing line between the two suburbs and limited Des Plaines to annexing unincorporated property south of Oakton and Mount Prospect to annexing property north of Oakton.

TEICHERT SAID that by changing the terms of the agreement, "It sounds like Des Plaines aggressively wants to curl around the end then try to go north" in taking in unincorporated property.

He said he was especially perplexed because the boundary agreement hammered out in two meetings between representatives of the two municipalities had been proposed by Des Plaines. "The very map we accepted was drawn up by Ald. (Alan) Ward," Ward proposed the changes in the agreement during the meeting Thursday night.

Mount Prospect village trustees will discuss the latest twist in the boundary dispute during an executive session meeting Tuesday night. Both municipalities are anxious to annex property near Elmhurst and Algonquin roads for tax benefits.

According to village manager

New police chief may be hometown boy

Mount Prospect's new police chief "probably" will be chosen from within the ranks.

That was the indication given Friday to The Herald by Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley. Eppley has the job of finding a replacement for Chief Bert Giddens, who is resigning May 17 for reasons of health.

Eppley, breaking a silence of almost two weeks on the subject, told The Herald that he was almost convinced that "we've got the talent within our own department." He quickly added though that he was "not prepared to make that a firm statement" yet.

The manager's comments came after he denied a report that he had told at least one group that no applications would be sought from members of the village police department. That report came out of the Arlington Heights-based Illinois Assn. of Chiefs of Police Service Bureau, a group that does interviewing of police chief candidates.

"That's not true. It would probably be the reverse of that," Eppley said. He denied ever talking to the service bureau about Giddens' replacement.

SOURCES in other neighboring police departments, however, have said members of those departments have been approached by Mount Prospect village officials and asked if they would want to be reviewed for Giddens' job. Reportedly, the men were given until May to answer.

Eppley, who has not advertised to fill the chief position, has already received 10 "unsolicited" applications. Only two of the applications, he said, are from members of the Mount Prospect police department.

Originally, Eppley said he would appoint an acting chief within the department, but now says that may change. It was Eppley who reportedly sought out Giddens, who was teaching at the time, to offer him the chief's job in late 1971.

Link asks why Woodview is 'flood area'

Mount Prospect Village Trustee Patrick J. Link has appealed for data used by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in designating the Woodview subdivision on Mount Prospect a "special flood-hazard area."

In letters to U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, and U. S. Senators Charles H. Percy and Adlai E. Stevenson III, Link asked them "to make inquiries with appropriate government agencies responsible" for issuing the designation and to furnish a copy of each and every report and/or analysis that led to the selection.

Residents of the subdivision, at the northeast corner of the village, have reacted with "puzzlement and alarm," at the designation, Link stated, "to say the least."

The "special flood hazard area" designation requires that property owners obtain federally subsidized flood insurance before they can arrange a mortgage loan, which could pose problems in selling houses.

LINK, WHO HAS lived in the subdivision for 16 years, said he is not aware of "any overland flooding in its entire history." (Continued on page 5)

Dist. 23 candidates

Battaglia: schools should be a challenge to students

A school system should strive to challenge students in order to develop a good educational program, according to Vincent Battaglia, incumbent member of the Dist. 23 school board.

"We have to make sure the children coming into our district are challenged," Battaglia says. "The administration and teachers should keep abreast of developments in education in order to do this."

Battaglia is seeking his first full term on the board. He was elected to a one-year term last April.

The candidate says he believes Dist. 23 offers a good, challenging educational program that is "well thought out."

"Because we are a small district it allows the board and the administration to be closer and know what's going on. We have a tendency to retain good teachers and this gives stability to the educational program."

THE BOARD strives to make the atmosphere in the district attractive to good teachers, Battaglia says, and this allows the teachers to operate at a level that is satisfying to them.

Although he feels the rapport with the faculty and the board is good, Battaglia says he feels negotiations with teachers should be held in private. "I don't know that open negotiations help anyone. Sometimes statements are made that don't have a purpose in negotiations and closed sessions allow complete attention to the real issues without cognizance of the public being present."

Battaglia says the biggest problem facing the district in the future is maintaining a high level of education while keeping taxes low. "The problem is whether we can keep the tax rate at the same level and continue to expand programs. With inflation, it's going to be difficult."

In spite of rising costs, however, the candidate says the district has managed to stabilize its finances. "It's getting better. We're trying to reduce our tax anticipation warrants by staying away from the frills."

Vincent Battaglia: Incumbent

BATTAGLIA SAYS some "frills" that the district tries to avoid are excessive salaries. "We have to be judicious in our spending and cognizant of our needs."

He adds that he views his role as a board member as that of being a watchdog for public funds. "The administration should examine how the district is run and the board should safeguard public funds to see that they are used wisely."

Battaglia says the district may be faced with the prospect of building a new school if land development continues. However, the incumbent says he does not believe land developers should be obligated to contribute land to a district for the purpose of building a school.

"The developer owes the district more than money. He owes the entire area a consciousness of the effect his development will have on the surrounding area."

Battaglia says he would like to see more citizen participation in district affairs but he doesn't know what, if anything, the board can do to stimulate public interest.

Although he believes the district is

EDITOR'S NOTE: Voters in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 will be called upon next week to elect two candidates for the school board. In this year's race two incumbents and a newcomer are trying for those positions and were interviewed by The Herald on various aspects of education and the community. Today The Herald presents the results of those interviews.

Stories by

BATTAGLIA SAYS schools need outside assistance that parents can provide in such areas as fund raising, for example. PTAs can also help schools because "They can be a bellweather for problems that are developing in the district."

Battaglia says the district should expand programs and develop those that make children more aware of their surroundings. Officials should take advantage of programs developed in other districts and incorporate them into the Dist. 23 curriculum. He suggested improvement in such areas as reading and foreign language study.

The candidate also endorses the emphasis on vocational education now entering the elementary level. "The sooner children are acquainted with the types of things around them, the sooner they become aware of the world."

Battaglia says teaching children about different jobs brings them closer to the adult world and helps them understand it.

tended and I would like to see this changed. There should be more communication between the board and the community."

Horna suggests one way to increase community participation in the district is to have parents with special vocational or professional training teach mini-courses at the schools. This will not only provide the children contact with careers, but it will give the students a more positive attitude about school, Horna believes.

Horna says he does not believe teachers should have the right to strike and the concept of them doing so is frustrating. "The ripoff is on the children when teachers strike, but what other course is available to them if a board refuses to listen to them?"

AS A BOARD member Horna says he would work to avoid a conflict that would lead to a teachers' strike.

Horna says he also believes tenure for teachers is not harmful to a district. "Teachers are public servants but tenure is more a mode of operation than a term of employment."

Although a teacher himself, Horna says he sees no conflict in his job as an educator and serving on the school board. "The board sets policy and it is up to the administration to carry out educational practices. I think my job provides me with certain advantages for being on the board since I am aware of school budgets and current trends in education."

"I view my role on the board as that of a parent and taxpayer who wants to know more about the district."

district's situation when making preliminary studies.

"I'm willing to cooperate with developers but only if they make an attempt to cooperate with us," Lace says. "I also think school boards should be allowed to have a say in zoning and we have lobbied for that in Springfield."

THE CANDIDATE also is interested in holding the line on taxes within the next few years.

"We run a tight operation and we don't appreciate waste or exorbitant salaries," Lace says. One of his aims in holding down taxes will be to reduce the amount of tax anticipation warrants sold in the district, Lace adds.

Lace would also like to see more citizen participation in district affairs in the future. "It's hard to get feedback from the community but we have had good results from surveys. Parents are candid and the board has taken many of their comments into consideration and implemented programs."

Lace wants to see an independent caucus resurrected in the district. "I believe in the caucus because it provides direction." The board president says he also believes citizen advisory groups can offer help to the board on specific areas that need to be studied.

The board will continue to provide much information to the residents, Lace says, including its policy to send home board agendas, news of special interest programs and a newsletter giving a brief wrapup of board meetings. Citizen participation at board meetings, another innovation started by Lace, also will continue, he says.

Was that Woody Herman?

Last Friday night, at Prospect High School's Multi Media Show, band director Ralph Wilder played the clarinet solo in the band's performance of Wood-chopper's Ball. Old-timers in the audience claim Wilder played as well as Woody Herman, who uses that piece as his theme song.

Woody Herman comes to Prospect Wednesday, at 8 p.m., for a concert to help raise funds for the Marching Knights' trip to Mexico. Tickets are $3 in advance, $3.50 at the door. Youngsters 10 and under pay only $1.50.

MR. AND MRS. J. W. Fleming, 119 N. Russel, recently spent eight days on Spain's colorful Costa Del Sol. The trip was a prize for Fleming who rated as a top sales representative for 3M's Building Service and Cleaning Products division in a year long competition. He competed with other members of the division's industrial sales force.

The Flemings rented a car in Spain and were able to explore some of the more remote areas of the country. They brought back some porcelain china and Spanish jewelry.

Four seek library board seats Tuesday

Four candidates will be on Tuesday's ballot for the Prospect Heights Library Board.

Three persons are seeking the two available six-year terms. They are incumbent Mrs. Carol Hardebeck, 209 E. Marion Ave.; incumbent Anthony Gaddini, 405 Na-Wa-Ta Pl., and Calvin Blickle, 203 W. Ridge Ave.

Mrs. George Kusch, 303 E. Olive St., a recent appointee to the library board, is seeking election to the remaining four years of her seat on the board.

Library district voters will be able to vote between noon and 7 p.m. Tuesday at the library, 12 N. Elm St. This will be the only polling place.

Link wants to know why Woodview is 'flood area'

He said the subdivision is subject to "a considerable amount of sanitary sewer backup," but said he regards that problem as due to inadequate sanitary sewer lines.

In addition to the two Illinois Senators and Crane, Link addressed a copy of the letter to Donald L. Collins, deputy assistant administrator in the HUD office in Washington. Collins told The Herald last week his office would reconsider its designation of Woodview as a "special flood-hazard area" if the village submits scientific and technical data conflicting with the HUD data.

He indicated the designation was based on several studies, including U. S. Geological Survey, U. S. Soil Conservation Service and U. S. Army Corps of Engineers reports.

Horna: state should provide more money

"Elementary school is the single most important concept in education for children," says Robert Horna, candidate for a seat on the Dist. 23 school board.

Horna, a resident of the district for seven years, is a teacher at Maine South High School in Park Ridge. He says he has a twofold reason for seeking election to the board.

"I have children in the district and I am concerned with the kind and quality of the education they receive. I also want to find out how the board spends its money and the only way to do that is to be on the board."

Horna says the district is heavy in tax anticipation warrants because not enough money is being provided by the state for education. "The state should take a greater role in providing money for education. Illinois is third in the amount of money it collects in taxes but ranks in the 40s in how much is disbursed to education."

THE DISTRICT will face more financial problems if the enrollment increases due to housing developments, Horna says. The money derived from these developments will not offset the costs of educating that many more children, he says.

Horna says the curriculum in grammar school should be flexible enough to accommodate both advanced and slower students. "The individualized approach can work at the grammar school level but philosophy of teaching depends on principals and teachers," he says.

The candidate also believes that grades offer the most viable means of evaluating students. "Our hands are tied on grades because the state says there has to be some means of student evaluation. A written evaluation without grades is better but time becomes a problem. I don't know if parents would be willing to pay to give teachers more time to prepare such evaluations."

Horna says educators should also be careful in interpreting tests because so many variables may account for test results.

PARENTS AND school officials should cooperate in teaching children discipline, Horna says. "Discipline is a dual role of both the parents and the school. There cannot be an individuality of roles. Parents should be interested in their children's school work and the role of the parent has to be evident in the educational process."

Although parents should have an important role in their children's education, Horna says parents in Dist. 23 are too apathetic. "PTA meetings are poorly at-

Lace: managers, not educators, needed

Melvin Lace, incumbent Dist. 23 board member seeking his third full term, says he is "no less than appalled" that more people are not running in the April 13 school board election.

Lace, who has served as board president for the past five years, says it is not necessary for a candidate to know all about education to run for the board. It is sufficient for a person seeking a board post to be community-oriented, Lace says.

He also believes that board members should be persons with management backgrounds rather than professional educators. "As a general rule I don't think educators should be on boards because they have to deal with taxes and I don't think they can be objective in handling them," Lace says.

LACE SAYS the fact that teachers, for example, are union members is another reason they should, as a rule, not run for school boards. The board must act in a management position, Lace says, and board members should thus be people in the management field.

The candidate says he is proud of some of the programs the district has incorporated in its curriculum during the years he has been on the board. The vocational and music programs are two such subjects, Lace says.

"The vocational program teaches cooking, sewing and shop and lets the students learn how to use their hands," Lace says. "Children should not come out of school without being able to use their hands."

Vocational education is good at the grammar school level, Lace says, because not all children are going on to college and this type of training is, therefore, helpful.

The music program has also expanded during the past five years to include band and chorus. The jazz band, Lace says, is one of the best in the state.

LACE SAYS the greatest problem he foresees facing the district within the next few years is increased construction on the surrounding open space. This, he says, could lead to increased enrollment for the district beyond what it is capable of handling.

"We have sufficient capacity now to handle our students but in two years that may change," he says. "The area is subject to change because of all the open space available."

Lace says the enrollment increase that would be created by housing developments would not only place burden on the schools but would create traffic problems in the area as well.

Lace says he is not opposed to all developments but he believes they should be well-planned and consider the school

Zoning scandal probes turn up suspected corruption

JAMES THOMPSON

by NANCY COWGER
and BOB CASEY

The massive federal investigation of corruption in Chicago and 44 suburbs is beginning to have a "domino effect," with evidence of wrongdoing turned up in one case often leading probes on to several others.

Among cases that U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office hopes to use to uncover corruption in other areas are zoning scandals in Hoffman Estates and Wheeling, The Herald has learned.

Bernard Peskin, a key figure in the Hoffman Estates case convicted Thursday of bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy, may be required to provide information in other cases under a grant of immunity from further prosecution.

THE U.S. ATTORNEY'S office plans to seek an immunity grant for Peskin, an attorney specializing in zoning matters, and obtain his testimony about approval of developments by other suburbs and by Cook County, according to a source close to the case.

The Wheeling probe resulted Jan. 31 in the indictments of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and five others on extortion and conspiracy charges. It has "opened a door" on corruption in Cook County government, another federal source said.

The Herald has learned that zoning actions by Cook County have been under scrutiny by federal investigators for several months. Asst. U. S. Atty. Samuel Skinner, head of Thompson's Special Investigations Division, confirmed that the county probe is under way but declined to comment further.

Last week's guilty verdict for Peskin, former state representative who resigned as Northfield Township Democratic committeeman just before his indictment Oct. 26, keeps Thompson's conviction record at 100 per cent in the suburban probe.

OF THE 14 PERSONS and one developer indicted so far in the investigation of corruption in 44 suburbs, seven have pleaded guilty, one has pleaded no contest, one has been found guilty and charges are pending against seven others.

Peskin's conviction by a federal jury followed earlier guilty pleas by six former Hoffman Estates officials and a plea of no contest by Kaufman and Broad, Inc., which used Peskin to funnel payoffs to village officials in 1968.

One of the six Wheeling defendants, former village trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the extortion of furniture from Wickes, Inc., for favorable zoning. Five other defendants, including Stavros, have pleaded innocent.

Also indicted in the suburban probe was Curtis C. Whittaker, mayor of south suburban Westhaven. He has pleaded innocent to charges that he extorted payoffs from developers.

ACCORDING TO CHARGES made at Peskin's trial, he may have knowledge of payoffs in communities other than Hoffman Estates.

Roy L. Jenkins, former village mayor who admitted taking Kaufman and Broad bribes from Peskin, testified that Peskin told him in 1968 of making payoffs in other instances for zoning.

Royal Faubion, former president of K&B's Illinois division, told Asst. U. S. Atty. Anton Valukas that K&B used Peskin's law firm "only to make payoffs to local officials," according to an account of an interview read during the trial by Thomas P. Sullivan, Peskin's attorney.

In addition to the Barrington Square project that was the subject of the bribery conspiracy in Hoffman Estates, K&B has built developments in Villa Park, (Continued on Page 2)

$17,000 state subsidy approved for bus service

by KURT BAER

A $17,000 Illinois state subsidy has been approved for Metron Systems Corp., operator of the seven-month-old commuter bus service in Arlington Heights.

The first installment of the operating subsidy should be paid to the company within a month, according to John Cook, an Illinois Department of Transportation official.

Metron must use $6,000 of the grant to repay the Village of Arlington Heights for a short-term subsidy it approved after company president Claude Luisada announced the Arlington Heights transit operations were on the verge of bankruptcy last month.

But the balance of the money will be enough to keep Metron operating for two to three more months, Luisada said Friday.

COOK SAID THE $17,000 subsidy was approved as part of an interim program intended to aid suburban bus companies until the Regional Transportation Authority goes into operation.

Luisada said he still does not know how, if at all, the RTA will help Metron. "I don't think anyone will know that until the RTA board (of directors) is appointed," he said.

Metron had hoped to receive its first subsidy check from the state back on Feb. 25. But delays in determining the company's eligibility held up authorization of the grant, Cook said.

As a result, Metron has missed the first of three installments. However, the money that would have been sent in the first payment will be included with the second, Cook said.

The amount of the subsidy is based on 1973 operating deficits, Cook said.

"Metron may be at a disadvantage in that regard since it only had three months of operation in 1973," he said.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Village Board voted March 25 to approve a one-time, $6,000 subsidy to pay back bills and keep the Arlington Heights bus operation running through April.

The company currently operates three commuter bus lines in the village, offering rush-hour bus service to and from the Arlington Heights train station. About 250 people use the service daily.

Ridership has been steadily increasing, and Luisada has predicted that the operation could be at a break even point financially by September.

The money problem has held up the start of dial-a-bus service in Arlington Heights. The door-to-door service would operate like a taxi company during the non-rush hours.

and Park in Arlington Heights and boarded the bus. A friend of the Guenther's, Geri Schoepke, handed out doughnuts and playing cards to make the 106-mile trip a pleasant one.

KAREN, 25, who grew up in Arlington Heights and attended Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows, met her husband when they both were attending college in Milwaukee. She is currently an art teacher in Fox Point and he is studying for a master's degree at Cardinal College in Milwaukee.

She insisted that the wedding be held at the Holy Hill Shrine in Hubertus for a romantic reason. . . . She and her husband went there often while in college.

Guests from Ottawa, Ill., and from San Diego, Calif., boarded on the bus to the wedding.

"It's so romantic," said Jim Gavin, one of the guests.

9 reserve park sites recommended

The Arlington Heights Plan Commission has recommended placing nine plots of land on the village map as reserve park sites.

The park district and village planner Joseph Kesler had recommended giving 12 sites reserve status. The reserve designation gives the park district first option in buying the land should it be sold for development.

The Kesler plan recommended the park district purchase available tracts of undeveloped land to improve the district's poor park acreage-per-population ratio. The plan called for the parks to meet minimum federal standards by 1995.

The sites approved by the commission are the Westminster Presbyterian Church, the Magnus Farm flood plains along Buffalo and MacDonald creeks, Rolling Green Country Club, the First Methodist Church and land adjacent to the Wilke-Kirchoff flood control basin.

The Village Board of Trustees will make the final decision concerning the sites on the reserve map.

Fake pipebomb found on school

A simulated pipebomb was discovered on the roof of Windsor School in Arlington Heights last week by a physical education teacher retrieving play balls.

The pipe was discovered to contain no explosives.

According to school principal William Roy the school was not evacuated.

Arlington Heights police removed the pipe from the school and turned it over to the Chicago police bomb and arson squad. Chicago police said the pipe was empty.

Police described the device as a pipe about seven inches long and capped at both ends. A fuse was inserted into the pipe and sealed with tape.

Illinois board endorses Sunday racing

The Illinois Racing Board has put its weight behind Sunday horse racing.

In recommended legislation which will be submitted to the General Assembly, the seven-member board backed recent suggestions that horse racing in Illinois be conducted year round, including Sundays.

It also proposed eliminating the 40-cent admission tax as an incentive for greater attendance at Illinois tracks, reducing the size of the racing board from seven to five members and paying board members $150 a day, to a maximum of $4,800 annually.

RACING BOARD members, appointed by the governor, now serve without pay.

Other recommendations include equalizing the betting tax on harness and thoroughbred races. Harness wagering is currently taxed at a lower rate. The board also wants to impose stiffer penalties for persons convicted of fixing races or drugging horses.

Dropping the 40 cent admission tax would cost the state about $2.3 million in yearly revenue. However, the board said it believes reducing the admission price would encourage greater attendance.

Money lost could be made up through additional racing dates and other changes in the racing tax laws.

Several weeks ago, the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission, also recommended year round horse racing, including Sundays.

JACK LOOME, the president of Arlington Park, has said he is not certain whether Sunday racing would prove profitable in Illinois. Demands for overtime or special Sunday wages could wipe out any additional income, he believes. Arlington Heights Pres. Jack Walsh is not opposed to Sunday racing, however, he has said he would want to know the hours and conditions under which such racing might be held at Arlington Park.

Loome also supports recommended changes that would allocate racing dates on a three-year rather than a one-year basis. The yearly uncertainty over when each race track will be open hampers planning and makes it difficult to draw top horsemen to the state, he said.

A proposal to change the law and permit year round racing was defeated in the legislature last year.

'Do you take this bus to be your energy-saving device?'

by BETTY LEE

The wedding of Karen Guenther and William Beltz last weekend was an energy-saving event.

Her father, Theodore Guenther, 615 S. Kennicott, Arlington Heights, ordered a bus Saturday to take Chicago-area guests to the wedding at Hubertus, Wis., a small town 20 miles northwest of Milwaukee.

The bus was an answer to one of Karen's pre-wedding woes: Would people come to a distant ceremony if they're not sure of getting enough gas to make the trip? She also was concerned about the energy shortage.

Guenther reassured her of her wedding plans and when a friend volunteered a bus, the problem was as good as solved.

Zoning board hearing

A request for a change from single-family to multiple-family zoning will be heard by the Arlington Heights Zoning Board of Appeals on Monday at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Ezra and Helen Walter, owners of a house located at 201 W. Euclid will request a zoning change that would enable more than one family to lease the house. The property is currently zoned for single-family dwelling.

Also at the hearing Miller Builders of 2604 Waterman Ave. will request a side yard variation and a continued hearing will be held on a lot size variation on Harvard Avenue near Euclid Avenue.

The hearings are open to the public.

Well equipment purchased by village

A total of $186,377 worth of equipment for Well 15 on Clearbrook Drive at the southern end of the village has been approved for purchase by the village board.

George Hardin of Chicago will provide a pump house motor and related equipment at a cost of $78,057. Wehling Well Works of Beecher will supply the pump for $108,320.

Both firms were low bidders for the equipment sale.

Schools being swamped with job applications

The employment race for teachers is on and school officials in Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 are besieged with scores of applications and interviews.

As many as 30 applicants a day are seeking teaching jobs in the district since it recently began recruiting for the 1974-75 school year, said James E. Riebock, director of personnel.

Last year the personnel office was swamped with 6,000 to 7,000 credentials sent by hopefuls and more than 600 per-

Police sergeant suspended 'indefinitely'

Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jack Weber has been suspended indefinitely.

Weber, of the traffic division and a 12-year veteran of the department, was suspended without pay two weeks ago. Police would not discuss circumstances surrounding Weber's suspension.

Police Chief L. W. Calderwood said, "All I can say now is that it is under investigation by this department."

Calderwood said a report would be presented to the village fire and police commission when the investigation is completed.

Weber was reportedly involved in an incident with merchandise allegedly taken from an area discount store. Police Capt. Maurice English would not comment on those reports.

"All I can say officially is there is an investigation into an alleged incident that was brought to the attention of Chief Calderwood," he said.

No charges have been placed against Weber, English said.

NEITHER ENGLISH nor Calderwood would give a date when the department's report would be completed. "We hope that it will be concluded as rapidly as possible. This would be in the best interests of all concerned," English said.

English indicated the report would be reviewed by Calderwood for "further action," prior to forwarding it to the commission.

The police and fire commission can review the chief's action with Weber. They can let the department's discipline stand, increase or lessen it, or remove the man from the force.

Harold Dotts, commission chairman, said there would be no hearing unless the incident was sufficient reason for "dismissal or removal." He said the matter is under police department jurisdiction until the report is submitted to the commission.

Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson declined to discuss Weber's suspension, saying, "I'm waiting for the report from Calderwood and I don't want to goof it up by talking about it."

PTA notes

Dunton School will hold "exhibit night" at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the school, 1200 S. Dunton, Arlington Heights.

Students have been working on various projects to be put on display. Parents and students are invited to visit the classrooms.

The Anti-Cruelty Society of Chicago will present a program to Westgate students during school hours today.

Students will display their classroom projects in an "exhibit night" Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the school, 1211 W. Grove.

A parent information seminar will be presented Tuesday at Ivy Hill School, 2111 N. Burke Dr. The program will begin at 8 p.m.

The seminar will be presented by the Arlington Heights Board of Education and the staff of Arlington Heights schools. The panel will include Donald Monroe, director of administration and planning for School Dist. 25; Edith Jolly, school board member; Stan John, principal of Ivy Hill School; and Mary Simon and Patricia Sjolund, teachers at the school.

The purpose of the seminar is to improve communication between the parents and school administrators. Topics of discussion will be based upon response to a survey conducted last fall.

The Parents' Club of St. James Parish Center in Arlington Heights will present its annual Bunny Brunch on April 20.

Called "Lollipops to Roses," the event will begin with a brunch followed by a fashion show of garments made and modeled by members of the St. James Parish.

Bicentennial chairman named

Former Arlington Heights Trustee Dwight Walton has been appointed chairman of the village's Bicentennial Commission.

Other members of the commission, which will plan local activities to commemorate the nation's 200th birthday, are Ronald Dodd, Lee Gubbins, Sue Lesh, Robert Heller, Florence Hendrickson and Paul Heinze.

The commission members will serve terms running to April 30, 1977.

Report by engineering firm to be expanded

The engineering firm of R. J. Peterson & Associates, Skokie, has been recommended to include street, sidewalk and lighting standards along with a sewer design manual it has prepared for the village.

The firm, frequently hired by the village, will be paid $2,400 for the report.

The Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding has been reviewing the sewer standards recommended in the design manual.
